

Judges Suggest Youth Commission

Pendleton—(UPI)—A panel of Oregon juvenile judges meeting here Friday recommended the establishment of an "independent" youth commission in Oregon to provide "leadership for progressive court services."

Yamhill County Judge R. E. Gentry, president of the group, said such a commission would have to be approved by the state legislature. It would not operate as a state commission.

The judge said the court service would be in the form of increased work and recreational facilities for boys and girls during probationary periods.

Other judges who attended the meeting were Joe A. Jaross, Washington county; D. R. Cook, Umatilla county; Robert McClain, Lincoln county, and Harry Fowler of Crook county.

Renne said the proposal would be sent to the legislative interim committee on judicial administration of review and action.

Man Files Appeal To Take Daughter

Portland—(UPI)—Ivan R. Miller, of Milwaukie, Ore., Friday filed an undertaking of appeal to the Oregon Supreme Court from a Washington county circuit court decision which refused him the right to take his 19-year-old daughter from a Catholic convent.

Miller sought a writ of mandamus in March to force his daughter Alice to return to her parental home from the Sisters of St. Marys Convent in Beaverton, Ore. He based his case on the claim of parental authority but Judge Glen Heiber ruled in favor of the girl who said she had won "an implied emancipation" earlier when her father forced her to choose between the church and her home.

Miller ordered a transcript of the Washington county case for his appeal which must be perfected within 35 days.

School News... Jackson School

By MAUREEN KILBY
On the afternoon of May 9, all students and teachers went out on Gustin Green and celebrated Health day. Each room ran foot races and a few students from each room were chosen to be in a sack race. First, second, and third place ribbons were given to children who won each race. After the races, a plaque was awarded to Mr. Gandt's room for having the highest health percentage.

The students went back to their rooms and had an ice cream treat, were given health buttons to those deserving and were dismissed for the day.

On May 15 all sixth grade mothers, fathers, or proxy parents graduated at the Parent Teacher Association meeting which was held that afternoon. They were awarded caps and given diplomas which were in the school colors of green and gold. After a few songs were sung, there was a short business meeting in which Bruce Metzger, Jackson school's new principal for next year, and Glenn Linn, McLoughlin Junior High's principal, were introduced by Robert Baccus. Refreshments were served in the cafeteria.

Election of officers was held May 16 and are as follows for next year: president, Kathryn Watson; vice president, Teresa Riggs; secretary, Kathryn Fixsen; treasurer, Mike McDonald; and yell queens, Linda Cosler, Fay Konopasek, Janet Kolkemo, Karen Maxon.

May 21, all sixth grade students had a visit to McLoughlin junior high school. The seventh graders prepared a program which was interesting. Several seventh graders took Jackson's sixth grade students on a tour of the school. A treat of ice cream bars was given to the students and afterwards they went on the field and played for a short time.

A spring program was presented to the parents May 22. The fourth, fifth, and sixth grade choruses sang several numbers. There was square dancing, and the band and orchestra presented several numbers.

On May 23, awards were given to the fourth, fifth, and sixth grade students for hall duty, library helpers, cafeteria helpers, orchestra, band, safety patrol and citizenship certificates. David Corbett was given a check for $5.00 for placing second in the Poppy Poster contest.

All the rooms had their class picnics the last two weeks of school. Many parents attended.

FINDS SUICIDE HARD

TOKYO—(UPI)—Brought to the hospital Saturday after unsuccessfully trying to kill himself, Yoshimitsu Imai said, "I had no idea suicide would be such an ordeal, and I won't try it again." Doctors found a small steel plate, a brass hook, a metal fitting and several nails in his stomach.

The well-stocked waterways of Tasmania could provide a big attraction to traveling United States fishermen.

Recent downpours have caused most farmers to solemnly go about turning their wet hay over and has caused the management at Squaw Lake to start refunding camp fees to many people, who find their brief vacation plans ruined when the first sprinkles occur. In good weather an average of 200 cars are registered at the lake during week ends, according to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mitchell. Many of these are visiting the lake for the first time.

Rural Reflections on personal notes from Helga Mitchell at Squaw Lake resort: After washing and drying boats, two swallows came winging their way toward an upturned boat, saying "This is an ideal spot for our young ones where we can fetch bugs." Mrs. Swallow flitted about, not quite certain yet, revealing her feminine choosiness. She darted under the boat seat, murmured something and flitted out again. Finally Mr. Swallow informed her this was where they would settle down. She was submissive to the head of the house, but Mrs. Mitchell shattered their dream when she released the boat into the water again. The young couple looked bewildered, and as they flew away, he said, "I told you so!"
