

Eight members of Girl Scout Troop 158, who have worked and saved money for the past four years for a trip, left Saturday morning in two station wagons for a tour through California. The girls, accompanied by their leader and her assistants, are wearing their official Girl Scout shorts and blouses or the scout dress uniform for the entire trip, keeping luggage to a minimum. Troop 158 members making the trip are Anita Ritchey, Mary Dodge, Marilyn Harwood, Lynn Peterson, Janette Jones, Loleta Settell, Ruth Milligan and Rosann Warren. Mrs. Maurice Ritchey is leader and Mrs. Wilmer Warren, assistant. Two younger sisters, also Girl Scouts, earned the privilege of going by baby sitting, doing housework and helping to bundle old newspapers, the sale of which provided part of the trip money.

Scouts Earn Money For California Trip

Ever since Girl Scout Troop 158 was organized in October of 1952, the members have planned and dreamed of a trip to California. The girls saved all of their dues money and worked at fund-raising projects. This spring the plans crystallized and Saturday morning eight girls, two leaders and their husbands, set off in two station wagons for a trip through California.

Making the trip are Anita Ritchey, Mary Dodge, Marilyn Harwood, Lynn Peterson, Janette Jones, Loleta Settell, Ruth Milligan and Rosann Warren. Mrs. Maurice Ritchey is troop leader and Mrs. Wilmer Warren, assistant. Mr. Ritchey and Mr. Warren are "fathers in charge."

Sharon Ritchey, member of Troop 170, and Patricia Warren, Troop 11, are also making the trip.

The troop, which has been sponsored continuously since organization by the auxiliary to Crater Lake post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, is being assisted by Girl Scout councils in California. In Turlock the girls and their leaders will be guests of an eighth grade troop, through the assistance of the Anaheim Girl Scout council the group will be guests in the La Palma Youth center at Anaheim, and in Sherman Oaks the girls will be guests of Mrs. Ruth Choia, a Girl Scout leader. In San Francisco the group will stay at the Coronet Motel, the manager of which is a former Girl Scout leader.

Careful Plans Made
The trip has been planned carefully in order that the girls may see as many points of interest and have a variety of experiences. In Sacramento they will visit the state capital and in southern California they will visit Disneyland and Knotts Berry farm, and spend a day in Hollywood and Los Angeles. The group will be guests on Art Linkletter's House Party Tuesday, June 10, a television program seen locally.

In San Francisco they will visit Golden Gate Park, the aquarium, the Hall of Science and the zoo. Dinner is planned at Fisherman's wharf, the girls will ride the cable cars, tour Chinatown and see Cinerama.

Members Active
The eight members of Troop 158 have been active troop members for six years, and three of them for seven years. Throughout the years they have given community service and participated in all phases of the Girl Scout camping program. They have attended Low Echo, scout established camp, day camp, have participated in troop camping and inter-troop camping and took part in the first Girl Scout camporee held at Camp Chiquapien. They have served as aides at day camp.

The two younger girls making the trip, since they are members of the leaders' families, have earned the privilege of going by working as baby sitters, assisting with housework, bundling old newspapers and in many ways assisting their mothers who were so busy with scout activities. The two women also reported that the two scout fathers have given much time to the troop in the past six years and "have endured no end of inconveniences to help with the trip."

This summer the troop members will receive the highest rank in intermediate Scouting, that of curvud bar, and are looking forward to Senior Scouting this fall at which time they will combine with Troop 17 to make one troop. These two troops have already held some joint meetings and a week end of troop camping.

City Chosen
In April of 1954 the girls began to make active plans for a trip. The original plan was to visit Yellowstone park, but as the girls grew older their plans changed. They believed that in this community they had ample opportunity for the outdoor type recreation and a visit to a large city appealed to them. Last October, after much discussion the troop voted unanimously to visit southern California.

To finance the trip the girls voted to save all dues, cookie sales proceeds, and gifts for this purpose. In accordance with Girl Scout policies, they have had not more than one sale per year besides the annual cookie sale. The main project was sale of Christmas candles and one baked food sale was held. To supplement these, the girls have furnished newspaper for a fruit packing concern for three years. Also each girl is furnishing part of her own expenses.

Roman Miscellany

By MARGARET SCHULER

Rome — Learning to know Rome is a big job. Official guides study for three years to prepare adequately to explain its wonders, in short order, to ubiquitous, bulging groups of tourists. But another type of guide might be useful also, to pick up where the erudite one leaves off. A "mop up" person, for those Interested Ones, with a few days to spare, good feet, and a willingness to walk, for persons not concerned with shopping for men's ties, gloves, or Borsolini hats.

Such a guide might start you off to Old Rome, where you may wander along narrow streets, to discover for yourself the interesting things to be found — old coats of arms, for example, of a Borghese, an Orsini or an old Medici family, fastened high on old palace walls. These are to be found on many an old street or piazza, or you may enjoy peering through open gates into courtyards and breathtaking effects of gardens, with their fountains, flowers and statues — statues — statues.

The not too fastidious persons might appreciate a ride on the ES or ED trams. They are unique, in that they circle the city, one going one way, and one the other. It costs 3 cents to go around as many times as you wish. You really see things, too. Besides passing the Colosseum, the Forum, St. Peter's and Old Walls, you cross the Tiber two times. If you have the time — and can afford it — you may step off to explore a bit, hop on, pay 3 cents more, and lurch around again. It takes about an hour to make a circle.

Visit Otello's
By now, it should be lunch time, — from one o'clock to four o'clock. If you enjoy eating, your guide, might take you for instance to Otello's.

Only a small sign, high up, advertises this garden restaurant, which you enter by way of a typical, long stone corridor. You will then be in an Italian-y place, as you will find in all Rome.

If it is the month of May the wisteria will be hanging in clusters above, and the lavender petals will drop on to pretty, dark heads, and into the crystal goblets of vino rosso.

In June, the sunlight glints through ivy, to the gaily colored tables and chairs, and onto the astonishing arrangement of vegetables and fruits, hanging about the marble fountain. As wine is the least expensive thing you can buy in Rome, you will probably have a decaiter or two of the "Wine of the house." — Francotti or Chianti, and for a pittance of what you would pay at one of the "tourist traps" you will have as good a meal as you could wish for. Don't however, expect any highly seasoned or garlicky foods. You just don't find them any place you go. You won't find tourists at Otello's either.

After you have eaten, you may as well relax with everybody else, because everything, including churches, is closed. It is said in Rome that "only dogs and Americans are on the streets between one and four." But at four o'clock, Rome comes again to its noisy, tumultuous life. And you start once more, all relaxed and rested.

Many Old Shops
Now, if you are a stamp collector, you can find great treasures, and spend as much as you can afford to. Or, if you like old prints, the guide will take you to fascinating old shops where you can spend hours browsing through prints, pages from old books, French bird pictures, English collections of ancient maps, hunt scenes, and etchings. Here is a place to buy gifts inexpensively.

If your guide has a macabre sense of humor, he may take you to an unparalleled cemetery, or to see the cats in the old ruins, or to see the more serious side of Rome — women ironing with old flat irons on big tables, or girls sewing, sitting up in windows where, at best, it is bad light.

But, by now, you are tired, for you have walked long distances. You can't enjoy Rome from a little car or taxi. So, for the grand finale, the guide leads you slowly up the Via Sistina past the Hassler, stone steps, and monument, through the tree covered boulevard up to the coffee terrace at the Villa Valladier.

It is now the Angelus hour, bells are ringing all over Rome: the swallows are diving and swirling about. You sit for coffee with your indefatigable guide, and look out, and over Rome, unveiled in all its glory in the setting sun.

Tomorrow your guide will continue as long as you can go. There is an incredible lot to see in Rome.

Girls from the east side of town will be picked up at Roosevelt school, on Academy street at 8:10 a.m.; at 8:15 those from the southwest section of Medford will be loaded at Eighth street and Oakdale, near the city Library.

Another stop will be made at Jacksonville highway and Arnold lane at 8:20 a.m. and the group in Jacksonville will be picked up at Second and California by Chris' Drugs, at 8:30 a.m. The camp session will open at 9:00 a.m. and dismiss at 2 p.m.

Girls from the Jackson-Lincoln neighborhoods may catch which ever bus is most convenient to them; on the first day of camp all those attending are to bring a sack lunch. Day camp will be held June 16 through June 19 and June 23 through June 26. It has been announced that in event of having to cancel the session for a day because of weather, the announcement will be carried over radio station KBOY.

The camp can use empty tuna fish cans, candle ends, coffee cans, spoons, and frozen juice cans for use in craft work.
