Cadet Quarters Provide Picture View of Rockies

By CARY KRAMER
UPI Staff Correspondent
Colorado Springs—(UPI)—The cadet quarters of the new Air Force Academy feature gracious living and a picture-window view of the Rocky Mountains.

The two-man rooms rival the finest modern hotel accommodations.

Built-in comfort features include sliding-door walk-in closets, eye-level bookcases, vinyl plastic floors and individual modern desks.

There are no radiators in the rooms. Heat comes from metal "wafers" set under the windows which are heated from a central unit.

If the cadets get tired of looking at the beautiful Rampart range of the Rockies they can rest their eyes on landscaped "inner court" gardens.

Indirect Lighting
The comfort theme is carried into dayrooms, meeting rooms and even classrooms.

The Academic Complex, which includes classrooms, auditoriums, closed circuit TV and a 250,000 volume library, is located near the cadet quarters.

The designers of the building, after long talks with some of the nation's leading educators, provided surroundings which promise to be the envy of the academic world.

An example of their planning is the lighting. The classrooms are designed for indirect lighting with no glare on desks. Students will not go from the extreme brightness of the outside to the dimmer classrooms.

About Half Done
A corridor acts as a buffer, graduating the light from mountain brilliance to proper indoor reading levels.

The blackboards will be arranged so that each cadet will have his own space, and can get an unobstructed view.

Some classrooms will be able to receive closed-circuit TV, while others will be able to both send and receive. Audio-visual techniques such as movies, slides, recordings and projections, will be used extensively.

Most important perhaps, under normal circumstances, only 12 cadets will take instruction in any class.

About half of the work under contract, has been completed. Congress has authorized 134 million dollars for the academy to date.

Almost one-third of the automobiles in use in the United States are estimated to be 10 years old and some are much older than that.

Needle Painting
