

Tourist Traffic in Area Shows Increase

Tourist traffic in southern Oregon was up 11 per cent June 1 over 1957, according to Kenneth Baker, director of research in area development for California Oregon Television Inc.

The estimate is based on figures from the California state quarantine service check stations on Highways 97, 99, 101, and 199, Baker said.

Baker pointed out at the Monday roundtable luncheon of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce that local merchants stand to profit from the increase in tourism. He said it is estimated that 11 to 12 per cent of the tourists' money goes into retailing outlets.

High Court Hands Down Three Rulings

Washington—(UPI)—Three rulings were handed down by the Supreme Court.

In a 5 to 4 ruling, the high court declared that the secretary of state has no authority to refuse a passport because of an applicant's alleged Communist party membership.

The ruling came on an appeal by artist Rockwell Kent, 73, Asanble Forks, N.Y., and psychiatrist Walter Briel, Los Angeles. Both were denied passports in 1955 after they refused to sign non-Communist affidavits. Both were accused of supporting Communist causes and of having been party members.

No Damages

In a 7 to 2 decision, the Court ruled that the United States is not liable for damages to 252 gold mining companies put out of business during World War II. The verdict reversed a Court of Claims finding in favor of six companies on Feb. 20, 1956.

The shut-down order was issued by the War Production board on Oct. 8, 1942 to channel miners into jobs more essential to the war effort. It applied to mines which produced only gold and no other metal.

The companies contended the WPB's action was a taking of private property without "just compensation" in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

No Positive Invasion

The Justice Department argued there was "positive invasion of the property" or use of it by the U.S., since the owners always retained title and possession.

In the third decision, the Court ruled that "hot cargo" labor contracts, common in the trucking industry, are permissible if followed voluntarily, but it said they cannot be legally enforced. The vote was 6 to 3.

Under the hot cargo clause of a collective bargaining agreement, workers cannot be required by their employer to handle non-union goods or goods from firms whose workers are on strike. According to AFL-CIO estimates, some 500,000 workers are now covered by such contracts.

TV Quiz Show Winnings Hiked

New York —(UPI)—Elfrida von Nardoff, the pretty walking encyclopedia from Brooklyn, ran her record television quiz earnings past the quarter-million-dollar mark Monday night.

Miss von Nardoff, a 32-year-old brunette who quit her job as a personnel officer to devote full-time to the quiz show "Twenty-One," added $5,500 to her previous earnings to reach $253,500 when her opponent, Herbert Hulse, a Goldsboro, N.C., bank clerk and lawyer, was unable to identify several United States ambassadors.

At the show's end however, the Brooklyn quiz whiz was one point behind her new opponent, Robert Leicester of New York, an assistant high school director. Both Miss von Nardoff and Leicester correctly answered questions on Greek mythology, baseball and bodies of water.

Ironically, Miss von Nardoff is worse off financially now—as far as ready cash is concerned—than when she first began to amass her TV fortune. She said she is in debt for about $2,000, which she has borrowed from friends to meet expenses since she quit her job. She cannot collect any of her prize money until she quits the show or is defeated.

Even at that, most of her prize money is earmarked for the federal government. Of her current $253,500 earnings, about $200,000 would go to the federal government for income taxes. New York State would take about an additional $17,000.

About 4 per cent of Brazil's people are over 60 years old.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by reputable agencies and counselors.

THE Family Council—St. H. Claude B.—Audrey can't do the work of a nurse.

Audrey B.—Is really too late?

Claude B.—My sister, an attractive single woman of 30, seems to have gone berserk. After 12 years in the entertainment business as a singer and dancer, she has decided she wants to become a nurse.

Audrey has never had to do the least physical labor, outside of her profession, in her life. She has never had to take care of anyone or to cater to their wants. When our mother was ill, I had to take care of her and Audrey could hardly bear to enter the sickroom.

Now, when she ought to be setting her mind on marriage, she suddenly announces she wants "to be of service to mankind." She doesn't seem to realize she won't be walking with a halo. She'll be doing the kind of work she has scorned all her life.

Audrey B.—I know I have always been known as the selfish one in my family, but does that mean there is no hope of my ever changing? I realize that I failed in my responsibility toward my mother, but perhaps I can make up for it a little bit by helping others.

I have not ruled out the possibility of marriage. Certainly nurses get married. Why not me? Actually my chances may be better, for although I have met loads of people in my profession, a lot of them just aren't the marrying kind.

Aside from this, I realize I can't go on being an entertainer all my life. This life once seemed very glamorous to me, but it has become just routine. The life of a nurse seems far more interesting and worthwhile. It is really too late?

The Council—As we see it, it's never too late to do anything within reason—and many individuals are capable of extending the boundaries of what is within reason far beyond Audrey's modest plan. Any older person who wishes to change professions would do far better to consult persons working in the field of their new choice than their friends and relatives. As long as they talk to friends and relatives, who lack both objectivity and information, the plan for the future remains in the talking stage and often dies there.

It is only after talking to nurses in a position of authority that Audrey will be able to tell exactly what becoming a nurse would entail. The professionals with whom she talks over her problems will be in a position to size her up and give her encouragement or discouragement, according to some objective standard. We do think it is advisable for Audrey to talk to more than one professional—just to make sure of getting that objective view of her situation.

Right now, Audrey's ideas may be a mixture of common sense, wishful thinking and sentimentality. But that doesn't mean she is not capable of getting down to brass tacks when confronted with possibilities. She'll never reach that stage however, if she continues a biased and emotional debate with her sister.
