Is That So?

Alexandria: This city is one of the biggest in Egypt today because of a construction job that rivals the building of the pyramids.

In the early 1800s, Mehemet Ali decided to restore Alexandria by linking it to the Nile via a canal. He did the job by 1820, using forced labor of 330,000 men. Later, Mehemet Ali and his successors decided to bring the entire delta under cultivation. It was a vast swamp, one of the finest waterfowl hunting areas in the world, but by means of criss-crossing it with drainage ditches and canals the majority of it has now been brought under cultivation.

But there is still plenty of sport for the fisherman, and plenty of wildfowl, too.

For example, on a canal, not so far from Alexandria, I saw a fisherman land a "tiger fish." He is appropriately named. He has all the fighting qualities of the bone fish of our Florida waters, and his teeth are sharp enough to snap an ordinary line. The one I saw—about six pounds—was taken on a spinner with a wire leader and a five-ounce rod. His leaps and runs would satisfy the most exacting fisherman.

The fish has an extremely hard mouth, and is said to be not particularly good eating, mainly on account of the bones. He has about as many of them as a carp, to which he is related and has a superficial resemblance.

Crocodile Bird

On another canal, I saw a spur-winged plover which some naturalists say is the true crocodile bird. He is a quarrelsome fellow about a foot long who sometimes jerks his head up and down like an automaton. He is predominantly dark in color, and a sharp spur on either shoulder is his most striking characteristic.

Some say he jabs the tender roof of the croc's mouth if the croc closes his jaws while the bird is picking his teeth.

The Arabs say this is how the bird got his spurs: Allah invited all the animals to dinner. This one bird forgot to go and later claimed he fell asleep. Allah, of course, knew the bird lied and rebuked him.

"You'll sleep no more, my friend," Allah said, giving him the spurs so he could no longer put his head under his wing.

HORNBROOK
Pair Meets Bishop Sheen

By KATHERINE CHAPMAN

Hornbrook — A once-in-a-lifetime honor was experienced Saturday evening, June 7, by Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Chapman, when they had the privilege of shaking hands with Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, and visiting briefly with him.

The Chapmans had driven to Portland, Ore., that day to meet a friend, Miss Anna L. Richling, of Omaha, Neb., who was arriving on the 9:30 plane at the Portland airport to spend her vacation with them.

While they were waiting at the airport, an earlier plane arrived from New York, bringing Bishop Sheen, who was to address the graduating class of Central Catholic High school.

A real thrill for them came when they were permitted to "sit in" on a press interview with Bishop Sheen, with reporters from the Portland Oregonian and the Journal, and then meeting the bishop afterwards.

In the interview, he was asked a question about politics and replied that he "had no interest in politics, but ask me about the New York Yankees . . . !" He said he had given up TV because it had become too difficult to attend to his office and the program, too.

Yet he still receives an average of 4,000 letters a day. "Forty per cent of that mail is from non-Catholics," he added. Every letter is answered by his staff. He was asked if, with all his talent, he had ever considered going on the stage, and his instant reply was, "No—no—no, none whatever. The Lord gave me this talent, I am returning the use of it to Him."

In connection with this, he also stated that in college, his speech professor told him he was without a doubt, the worst pupil he had ever had, and advised him never to try to speak in public.

At one point in the interview, a small boy pushed his way into the group, and marched straight up to the Bishop. "Who are you, and what are you doing?" he asked with small-boy candor. The auxiliary bishop of New York reached out his hand and drew the small boy into the circle of his arm. Touching himself on the chest in a manner familiar to his TV audiences, he said, "I am Bishop Fulton Sheen, and these men are reporters interviewing me for the newspapers." Flash bulbs popped as the man and the boy sat together, and the warmth of his personality began to show in the twinkle of the dark expressive eyes.

The appearance of the small boy released the tension of the interview, and the bishop began to talk with all the charm and vitality seen on his TV appearances. After a few more questions, he stood and shook hands with the handful of people about him, and in response to a request of Mr. and Mrs. Chapman, he very graciously autographed a card with his television trademark: "God Love you—Fulton J. Sheen."

On Sunday, the Chapmans and Miss Richling attended mass in the Sanctuary of Our Sorrowful Mother in Portland, then left for Hornbrook via the Oregon coast.

After an all night stay in Tillamook, they took the tour through the Tillamook cheese factory, then drove as far as Gold Beach, and the next day took the trip up the Rogue river in the mail boat to Agness and had dinner at the Singing Springs ranch.

This is a never-to-be forgotten experience, and highly recommended for anyone in this area looking for an out-of-the-ordinary outing for two or three days.

A visit to a redwood grove completed the sight-seeing enroute home.

Visiting Mrs. Ella Rose on Tuesday were her friends, Mrs. Fred Cox and Mrs. T. W. Sanford, of Ashland.

Week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Walsh were her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Cameron of Couer d'Alene, Idaho.

Mrs. Gordon Jacobs is recuperating at home from injuries sustained in a car accident on Saturday at the intersection of Highway 99 and the Ditch creek road into Hornbrook.

Mrs. Jacobs was taken to the Siskiyou General hospital in Yreka, and although her injuries were not serious, she remained in the hospital a few days for observation.

Mrs. George Brautlacht was hostess on Thursday for the Women's Society of the Methodist church.

Attending the meeting were the president, Mrs. Henley Clawson, Mrs. Ardon Burns, Mrs. Minnie Bloomingcamp, Mrs. Mary Taggart, Mrs. S. D. Haworth, Mrs. Bertha Bradley, and Mrs. Ed Mason.

San Francisco was the destination of two Hornbrook couples last week, although they did not make the trip together. Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Cummins and children, Loren Howard and Jennifer, were in the city on business. In the absence of the Smiths, Mrs. Gladys Jones, and her son Willis, worked in the store.

Florida Man Dies In Wreck Near Burns

Burns — (UPI) — A Miami, Fla., man was killed Sunday and his wife remained in serious condition in a Burns hospital today with injuries suffered when their car went out of control on a curve 20 miles east of here on Highway 20 and crashed, rolling over several times.

State police identified the victim as Isidore Gene Lavinsky, 46, Miami. His wife, Betty Maude, 50, was listed in serious condition here with chest injuries.

MANUFACTURER DIES

Manhasset, N. Y.—(UPI)—Dr. B. Thurber Guild, 72, a physician and former pharmaceutical manufacturer, died Sunday after a short illness. He helped develop phisoderm, a skin detergent for persons allergic to soap, and phisohex, a detergent to prevent the spread of infections.

Lauran Paine drove to Eugene, Ore., Thursday, to bring his son, Bob, home for the summer. Bob has completed his first year as a pre-med student at the University of Oregon.

Bob's fraternity is Alpha Phi Omega, of which he is corresponding secretary. A men's service honorary fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega is composed of young men who at one time were members of the Boy Scouts of America. Bob is a member of Hornbrook troop 38, and is an Eagle Scout. His younger brother, Lornie, has been selected by Troop 38 to become a member of the Order of the Arrow, and was scheduled for initiation into the order this week end at Camp McLoughlin at Lake o' the Woods.

Miss Clara Ladd, who teaches at Susanville, Calif., has arrived home for the summer.

Next Saturday, June 21, at 1:30 p.m. a card party is to be given by the Altar Society of the local Catholic church. The party will be held in the Grange hall. At this time, too, the portable barbecue outfit will be given away.
