Boardman (UPI)—A fire burned over more than 50,000 acres of rangeland on the Boardman bombing range before it was brought under control.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Breeding Animals for Temperament

I recently read that after many years of breeding white rats for laboratory use, a strain has now been obtained, the members of which can be handled safely. Certainly, no one in his senses would ever try to pick up a wild Norway rat. A few years ago I read that a scientist, by in-breeding the occasional rats which were so timid and nervous that when exposed in an open tub, they urinated and moved their bowels, obtained a breed of animals almost all of which had this "mucous colitis" type of temperament. More recently I read a paper in which a man reported breeding some 50 pups from a very shy Basenji bitch. As he expected, about half of the pups were abnormally shy.

C. S. Hall and S. J. Klein (1942) were able by selective breeding to establish several strains of rats differing in aggressiveness. J. P. Scott (1942) bred into house-mice a number of differences in social behavior. R. C. Tryon (1940) was able to breed more intelligence into rats, as shown by their greater ability to learn their way through a maze, and W. T. Heron (1941) obtained similar results with breeding animals that had an increased tendency to activity. These studies interest me because they show how much heredity has to do with determining the temperament and intelligence of small animals. In these experiments the environment is kept constant.

A Mental Depression

One of the best descriptions ever given of a depression was that of Charles Lamb. He wrote to a friend, "Dear B. B. Do you know what it is to succumb under an insurmountable day-mare—a whorl of lethargy? Falstaff calls it an indisposition to do anything, or be anything; a total deadness and distaste, a suspension of vitality; an indifference to localities; a numb, soporific, good-for-nothingness, an ossification all over; an oyster-like insensibility to the passing events; a mind-stupor, a bravado defiance to the needles of a thrusting-conscience? I have not volition enough left to dot my eyes, much less to comb my eyebrows; my eyes are set in my head; my brains are gone out to see a poor relation in Moorfields, and they did not say when they'd come back again."

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.
