The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Shirley F.—My sister and my husband are in love.
Bruno F.—I just want to figure things out.

Shirley F.—My husband and I have been married eight years and have three children. We had always been happy, until a few months ago when I became quite ill and my younger sister came to stay with us to help me out. At the time I was ill I hardly knew what was going on, but since I have recovered, I realize things were not as they should be. My sister no longer visits us and my husband was withdrawn and cold toward me. Finally I wormed the information out of my sister that she and my husband were in love.

My husband denies anything wrong has taken place, but something my sister said leads me to think otherwise. I can't stand living this way and I offered my husband a divorce. He says he wants only a temporary separation.

Bruno F.—All I want is a chance to think things out. My plan is to board out for a while so I can figure things out. Shirley says if I leave now she never wants to see me again.

I realize I should never have let things come to such a serious point, but I am telling the truth when I say the things Shirley suspects never happened. Why must she torture me and herself with her suspicions?

Shirley's sister and I have hardly seen one another since she left our home. But I know through a mutual friend that she is still carrying the torch for me.

I don't know what I think any longer. I do care for her, but I realize it's all wrong, and I never wanted to break up our home and leave my kids. It was all a mistake.

The Council: We believe there is only one suitable place in which Bruno can "think things out"—and that is his head. He does not need to board out to do it. Bruno seems to be a very weak man. Despite his good intentions, he can easily become the prey of any evil-intentioned woman. He must recognize his weakness and seek strength through greater understanding of himself and of higher spiritual and moral values.
