

Cloud Layer Cools Oregon

Portland —(UPI)—A cloud cover helped cool off western Oregon this morning but temperatures in the 90's were predicted for parts of eastern Oregon today.

Cooler maritime air nosed in from the beaches and brought a fine mist to some areas, including Portland, during the early morning hours. The sun was expected to come out again in the afternoon but temperatures will be cooler.

Highs up to 96 were predicted for northeast Oregon today. Pendleton had 97 Wednesday.

Thunderstorms were reported in southwest Oregon and more were expected today in the Cascades.

John Hunt, regional fire control officer for the Bureau of Land Management, said a blaze which covered 27,000 acres of winter grazing range near Boardman was being mopped up.

Portland, which had 95 Monday and 97 Tuesday, used 170 million gallons of water each day.

French Protestant reformer Guillaume Farel was exiled from his native land.

Publishers May Get Tax Relief

Washington —(UPI)—Sen. Frank Carlson (R-Kan.) Wednesday announced Senate Finance Committee approval of a measure designed to correct a "serious inequity" in tax laws for some newspapers and magazines.

Carlson said the committee unanimously approved an amendment to a House-passed tax bill which would permit publishers to defer reporting of prepaid subscription income for tax purposes until such income was earned.

A 1940 Internal Revenue ruling permitted publishers who had consistently reported prepaid subscriptions when earned, to continue to do so.

Carlson said the amendment approved Wednesday would remove a "hardship" for the relatively few publishers not permitted to use the "earned" basis of reporting.

The amendment was offered to a bill now pending before the Finance Committee which makes technical corrections in the Internal Revenue code.

Methodist Laymen Filling Pulpits

Portland —(UPI)—A Methodist church official said Wednesday night more than 5000 Methodist laymen are filling pulpits on Sundays in churches which do not have regular pastors.

The statement came from Dr. Robert G. Mayfield of Chicago, executive secretary of the denomination's general board of lay activities. He spoke to the Oregon Methodist all-conference banquet here.

He said training of lay speakers was one of three major projects of the board. The others are Christian stewardship and the organization of Methodist Men. The latter, he said, has 11,850 clubs across America with an average of 50 men per club.

Senate Works on Excise Tax Bill

Washington —(UPI)—The Senate was expected to complete action today in a bill to extend present corporation and excise tax rates for another year.

The administration and top Democratic leaders in Congress have agreed taxes should not be cut. The measure is expected to win Senate approval. In the face of such opposition, Sen. George A. Smathers (D-Fla.) all but conceded that the bill in order to repeal federal freight and passenger taxes.

Smathers, a member of the Senate Finance committee, wanted to end the wartime transportation levies to help the nation's hard-pressed railroads. But he said his drive appeared to be "in great danger."

Portland —(UPI)—George Oliver Lawrence Frazier, 31, was found guilty by a Circuit Court jury Wednesday of a robbery committed here in 1948.

Long-Missing Scientist Found Working as Race Track Groom

Inglewood, Calif. —(UPI)—Albert Clark Reed, brilliant government scientist who turned up as a race track groom after a mysterious six-year disappearance, said today that only his love for horses made his "second life" bearable.

"Otherwise," the 51-year-old former top secret scientist said, "I've regretted almost every minute since my decision to begin a new life."

During his absence, his wife died of cancer and his son, Timothy, now 12, was adopted.

Although Reed worked at Hollywood Park race track, only a few miles from his family's former home in Pasadena, he knew nothing of his wife and son until traced through security regulations which require all users of the stable area to be fingerprinted.

No Explanation—Reed, who has been going under the name of Alfred Cole Reese, said:

"I'm certainly not proud of what I did. But the terrible thing is that I still can't explain why I did it. It doesn't make sense. It goes against my grain. No, I certainly wouldn't do it again."

The cowboy-garbed ex-scientist, who vanished while working on a top secret project for the government at the California Institute of Technology, said that only his interest in horses soothed the pain of his "wrong decision."

"A horse is just as complicated and fascinating as any airplane, rocket or missile—and it's got a brain," he said. "A horse is very willing to learn, but you really can't teach anything to a mechanical thing."

He added: "I love horses. They're wonderful, intelligent, sensitive creatures. I don't know what I'll do now, but I love this work and hope to stay with horses."

Kept on Going—Reed disappeared on July 7, 1952, when he set out from his Pasadena home for a special meeting at Caltech.

"I just kept on going," he said. At the time, it was feared he might have been kidnapped by Communist agents because of his reported pioneering work on atomic weapons.

But, Reed said, "I never knew or saw a Communist."

He got to like cowboys and horses around Phoenix, he said, and in 1954 he went with a shipment of racing ponies to Pleasanton, Calif.

"I've been working around race tracks ever since," he said.
