BEATING THE HEAT AT THE BEACH—Patty Gilb, 3, and Grady Fuson, 2, brought along their own water to splash in at the beach in San Diego, Calif. At the moment, Patty seems to be getting the worst of the splashing.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Georgia J. — I don't spare the rod.
Andrew J. — It's not right for teenage children.

Georgia J.—I was widowed at an early age and left with two young children — a girl and boy — to bring up single-handed. I have had to be mother and father and I feel I have done a good job. Everyone admires my children, now 15 and 17.

One reason for their good behavior is my firm conviction that the rod should not be spared. I have administered sound and systematic spankings with the hairbrush whenever they have misbehaved, and do it to this very day.

Recently, I remarried and my husband said he was shocked at this method of discipline. I am shocked he doesn't realize how effective I have been as a parent and, besides, I feel he has no right to interfere between me and my children.

Andrew J. — I never intended to interfere between Georgia and the children, but this thing really gets my goat. I just don't think it's right to spank children of that age.

One day Georgia's daughter came in late and my wife lifted her dress and spanked her in my presence. I didn't think that was right and I was amazed that the girl took it without a word.

It is true the children are exceptionally well-behaved, nice kids. They aren't fresh like other teen-agers, and do as they are told. My wife says the proof is in the pudding, and the ends justify the means. There is something in that, and yet I just can't take it when I see a full-grown boy or girl getting spanked like that.

The Council: It is true spanking will sometimes bring a bothersome child up short. It is a quick and easy way of reminding a child that authority exists and he'd better get into line.

We can't agree, however, that the business of bringing up a child is essentially a problem of discipline. Children, like adults, must express their fears and discomforts in some form. It will usually be a form which incurs some disapproval. If the adult's answer is a slap or a beating, the child either rebels and becomes worse than ever, or gives in and ceases to express himself in the undesired form. The problem remains and the child seeks another form of expression. Sometimes he hits on a worthwhile, is forced to build up resentment against the parent, or to give in and seek punishment for the many gults that plague him. He never learns to build up his own inner authority, based on his knowledge of right and reasonable behavior.

Georgia's spanking of a creative form. Often he does

Certainly with teen-agers, whose problems are often complex, spanking is a most inadequate method. The child teen-age girl in the presence of her stepfather smacks of abnormal behavior. That "the girl took it without a word" is not a good sign. She acted as an accomplice with her mother in an action grossly improper.

We think Georgia should recognize that she, personally, has a problem. She should discuss it in detail with a competent worker — a doctor or a social worker — attached to a family agency. (Copyright 1958, General Features Corp.)
