

Actress Comments On Clothes

Editor's note: Vernon Scott is on vacation. Writing a column today is Loretta Young, whose VT wardrobe is the best in Hollywood. The actress says simple clothes are the best.

By LORETTA YOUNG
United Press International
Hollywood—(UPI)—Women like myself, who are in the public eye, must dress for glamour. It's part of our job. However, I confess that I enjoy it.

Right now, though, I'd better be sure that we—you and I—mean the same thing by "glamour." Glamorous clothes are not necessarily super-sophisticated or ultra-advanced in style or terribly expensive.

Glamorous clothes are those which are suited to you, individually, so as to be the greatest compliment to your personality, and they're suited to the occasion for which they're to be worn.

Also, they're simple. They are based on good lines... are exquisite and timeless. I have dresses that are 10 years old and as undated today as when I bought them. I put them away every few years, and then bring them out again to the "oohs" and "aahs" of friends who have forgotten them and think I have a new gown!

Fine designers, like Werle, who is responsible for my gowns on the hottest part of my NBC-TV program "The Loretta Young Show," attain their reputation by emphasizing fine workmanship, marvelous fabrics, and classic lines.

By studying the work of these top-ranking designers in fashion magazines, any woman can learn to recognize and appreciate the same qualities in the inexpensive copies that make the average American woman the best dressed in the world.

Playing up one important feature of an ensemble will almost invariably lead to a smart appearance. If I have a sensational hat, I wear a very simple dress so that nothing detracts from my chapeau. My husband gave me a beautiful pair of diamond earrings for one of our anniversaries, and when I wear them, I'm always careful to choose a dress with plain neckline, so that all eyes turn ear-wards.

Phoenix Women Hold Silver Tea

The serving committee was Mrs. W. M. Caldwell, Mrs. Enid Caster, Mrs. Horace Root and Mrs. Ray Claffin. Mrs. Bertha Medcalf and Mrs. Gertrude Watkins poured.

Women of the association sponsored two booties for the annual Phoenix festival.

etc." and of a hit film made from the book, had an 80-day time limit. The Thwaites are giving themselves about four years, doing their globe circling all by car.

The three—Fred, 50, Jessica, his wife who is a former fashion model, and Roger, their younger son—set out in 1955 and in May or so of next year will be back home in Buckingham, Bong Bong, near Sydney.

Buckling Bong, meaning "running water," is the name of their property, located on Bong Bong Hill, in Bong Bong parish.

That is, they'll be home if all goes, as planned the rest of the trip and there are no more perilous crossings of the desert.

Travelled 40,000 Miles
"Actually we will have been around the world and a half," said Thwaites. The family will have seen parts of all the continents except South America—"We'll catch it on another trip," travelled 40,000 miles, and spent approximately $15,250 in their unusual sightseeing and fact-finding trip.

Thwaites, a former racing driver, is author of 25 books, most of them novels and many best-sellers in his homeland. "Ever since I was a child, I've been studying the atlas and figuring how to make it smaller," he said, explaining his wanderlust.

He and the missus originally wanted to start their trip in 1938 "as sort of a delayed honeymoon" but as he explained the beginnings of World War II "a man named Hitler delayed things for a while." They finally got going "when Roger was big enough to travel. Roger is now 14. Another son, Garry, 18, is preparing a little travel on his own. He is in the merchant Navy and a student of navigation at Southampton, England.

First Leg
The first leg of their trip took them 12,000 miles from London to Sydney by way of the Continent, the Middle East, India, and Ceylon. The second began in Vancouver, B.C., brought them across Canada and part of the United States, and into New York for a couple of weeks.

Then they, and their British-made Hillman estate car station wagon, which is decorated with a map of the world, will ship on to London.

"I intend to see some style shows and 'My Fair Lady,'" said Mrs. Thwaites, a slim handsome woman so elegantly dressed I found it hard to believe she hadn't just stepped out of a Dior salon.

"I'm going to see Coney Island," Roger spoke up.

The Thwaites will spend the summer touring Europe and then will settle down in Spain for three months, while Fred puts together his 26th book—this one, a sequel to the travel book he wrote after the first leg of the trip.

He will continue by car into Africa, across the Sahara and on home. Mrs. Thwaites and Roger will go by ship the rest of the way.

The whole family nearly lost its life in crossing the Iraqi Desert to Baghdad, because of sandstorms which delayed their progress, heat in the 120-130 degree range, and a water supply gone because the canvas container sprang a leak.

Soup Toppings
For added soup appeal, top with chopped parsley, thin lemon slices, minced chives or green onions, bits of cooked bacon, diced ham or chicken, whipped or sour cream, toasted bread rounds, sieved cooked egg yolks, grated cheese or with crumbled blue cheese.

Survey Shows Teenagers Have Craving to be Liked

New York—A craving to be liked, an urge to conform and a kind of passive anti-intellectualism—these attitudes characterize today's teenagers according to the results of a nationwide survey centered on U.S. high school youngsters made by Drs. H. H. Remmers and D. H. Radler of Purdue university. Results of the survey are the basis of an article in Scientific American.

"As individuals, our nation's youngsters consistently value others' opinions above their own," said Drs. Remmers and Radler this week. "Fewer than half questioned in our survey, which accurately represented all high school grades across the country, claim they think things out for themselves. No more than 18 per cent are willing to say that their tastes are quite different from those of their friends. Most have a horror of being branded an 'oddball.' Yet, in spite of these admissions, most teenagers declare that their freedom is not too limited.

"Our soundings appear to have uncovered some of the roots of anti-intellectualism in the U.S. Almost three-quarters of the high school students believe that the most important thing they can learn in school is 'how to get along with people.' Only 14 per cent place academic learning first. In a recent poll of a representative sample of college students we found that the same attitude prevails at the university level: 60 per cent would rather be popular than brilliant. Some 51 per cent believe that students with low grades are more likely to be popular than those who get good marks; 72 per cent believe that the development of a well-rounded personality is the main purpose of education; 71 per cent feel that personality counts more than grades when it comes to looking for a job.

Disdain Learning
"The disdain for learning shows up most sharply and most dismayingly in the attitude of teenagers toward science and scientists. Forty per cent of the high school students think that the earth is the center of the universe! Sixty-three per cent believe the earth's circumference is 125,000 miles! More than a third think scientific work boring; 25 per cent think scientists as a group 'are more than a little bit odd'; about 30 per cent believe that a scientist cannot enjoy life or raise a normal family.

"In a poll in October, 1957—the month of Sputnik I—68 per cent of the teenagers said they would not like to be scientists. A majority asserted that scientists are likely to be radical and that they take no thought for the consequences of their work.

"Most disquieting is the fact that views of this kind are just as common among students of high scientific aptitude as among those who have no interest in science. The climate of popular opinion among the nation's youth undoubtedly is keeping many able boys and girls out of science.

Popularity Stressed
