

Lockheed U2 Jets Grounded After Two Explosions

Del Rio, Tex.—(UPI)—The Air Force has grounded all of its Lockheed U2 jets, used for secret high altitude weather information gathering, until it determines why two of the planes exploded within 24 hours this week.

Authorities indicated today they had no idea when a 30-man investigating team would conclude its probe of the wreckage of the U2s, and two F100D Super Sabres which crashed within 100 miles in sparsely populated Western Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

The pilot of each one-man plane was killed.

Too Much Speed Hinted

"If there was a survivor he would be able to pinpoint the entire situation," said Capt. Lloyd Strot, public information officer at Laughlin Air Force Base here, referring to the U2 crashes.

Col. John Swafford of Laughlin, who led the investigating team at the scene of the second U2 crash 23 miles from Tucumcari, N.M., said the plane may have exploded because the pilot went too fast.

Swafford and other Air Force officers said there was no reason to suspect sabotage. The U2s had been based at Laughlin and the F100D jets at Cannon AFB, Clovis, N.M.

The U2s, which Strot said have been used to gather information about cosmic rays and other atmospheric elements, were ordered grounded by Brig. Gen. Austin D. Russell, commander of the 4898th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing at Del Rio.

Eastern Oregon Ranch Land Burns

Pendleton — (UPI) — More than 750 acres of ranch land were seared Thursday by a rash of range fires in an area northwest of Pendleton.

One blaze driven by a brisk, dry wind, whipped the flames over some 500 acres of rich farm land, including 350 acres of unharvested wheat and barley.

The fire for a time threatened the Gene Bissinger ranch located about 20 miles northwest of Pendleton, but frantic efforts by some 75 men and 15 radio control trucks contained the blaze with shovels, water and wet burlap sacks.

Two fires in the Despain Gulch area about 10 miles northwest of Pendleton broke out about 1 p.m., but were under control an hour later after charring about 200 acres of stubble and consuming another 60 acres of unharvested wheat and barley.

More than 400 acres of unharvested wheat and barley were destroyed by the fires, with an additional 350 acres of barley stubble and rangeland being burned, officials said.

Approach of Death Described in Letter

Los Angeles — (UPI) — Death's stealthy approach was recorded today in a note written by Donald Allen, 48-year-old electronics engineer, temporarily unemployed and worried about finances and his health.

Police said Allen took an overdose of sleeping pills, sat down in the den of his home and began to write of his life for his wife and his son and then of his inability to go on. Laboriously, he scrawled, "It's just too much. . . I'm getting sleepy. . ."

Then there was nothing.

His body was found by his wife.
