Eugene Bennett Returns To Make Home in Medford

Eugene Bennett, who in recent years has divided his time between Chicago and Medford, has returned to Medford for an indefinite stay. Mr. Bennett, an artist, who taught in one of the Chicago high schools, plans to spend the major part of his time painting, with occasional trips to other parts of the country to visit museums and art galleries and to arrange shows of his own.

During his years in Chicago the young artist worked up a considerable following among artists, art critics and art fans. When he left Chicago, Edith Weigle of the Chicago Tribune stated in an article about his departure that "It is a loss to Chicago's art world to have Mr. Bennett leave, for he is one of our outstanding young modernists. . . . A recent one-man show carried the conviction that here was a truly brilliant, original and creative artist."

His prize-winning painting at the Navy pier show in Chicago last year is now in the Chicago Artists' exhibition touring Europe, and his prints are included in the Museum of Modern Art's Twenty American Printmakers' exhibit. A number of other awards are listed to his credit in recent years.

Mr. Bennett is now living at 337 South Grape street and is searching for a larger building in which to work, teach, and have space to exhibit paintings.

Mrs. Cedric DuBois and daughter, Miss Carol DuBois, Minneapolis, left Wednesday afternoon by plane for Portland after a stay here with Mrs. DuBois' three cousins, Mrs. James Stevens, Mrs. Grace Fiero and Mrs. Richard D. Werner. In Portland they will be guests of Mrs. DuBois' uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. Rudolph Engel. Mrs. DuBois, the former Cornelia Andrews, and her daughter were honored at a number of small parties during their week-long visit here.
