by Alfred Hitchcock

A mild and inoffensive chap, this famed director complains he's a victim of his own handiwork.

On location, Hitchcock studies graveyard used in his latest spine-tingler, "Vertigo." Film co-stars Jimmy Stewart and Kim Novak.

WHEN ART LINKLETTER recently asked a group of children about their favorite television programs, one little boy said, "I like Alfred Hitchcock best because he's so gruesome."

I'm not really gruesome. On the contrary, I'm a very timid and law-abiding person. I always have been.

Just before I came to America, for example, I was caught driving across a double line. For weeks I worried about the ticket and what the judge might do to me. He didn't do anything because it turned out that the officer who gave me the citation was off duty at the time and had no right to hand it to me in the first place. Yet I was so terrified by the experience that I didn't drive another car for 11 years.
