

Nebraska Killer's Execution Could Be Postponed for Years

Lincoln, Neb. — (UPI) — Mass killer Charles Starkweather will have to wait months, perhaps years, to find out whether he will be executed under a death sentence handed down June 7.

Starkweather's execution has been set for Dec. 17 but the legal processes of Nebraska make it almost certain the sentence will not be carried out at that time.

A state law passed by the 1957 Legislature requires the Nebraska Supreme Court to review all capital punishment sentences.

The law is the result of attempts to outlaw the death sentence in the state. The Legislature refused to abolish the electric chair but set up the review as a compromise.

30 Days for Appeal

The law gives Starkweather's court-appointed attorneys 30 days to prepare an appeal. The Supreme Court then allows 70 days for the attorneys to file briefs containing citations supporting the appeal arguments.

When the appeal reaches the Supreme Court, the jurisdiction of prosecution changes from the county attorney to the attorney general.

He then has 30 days to answer the briefs filed by the defense. Next, the case is docketed for hearing. Criminal cases have priority on the docket but there is no way of determining the delay at this point.

Each side is allowed 30 minutes to present its case before the Supreme Court. A decision usually follows within 30 days.

If the court affirms the sentence, the defense is allowed 20 days to ask for a re-hearing. A ruling on re-hearings usually takes about two weeks.

During the Supreme Court proceedings a stay of execution is granted and after determination of the case a new date is set if necessary by Supreme Court mandate.

The law provides that execution must take place at least 100 days after a judgement is pronounced.

May Go To U. S. Court

From the state Supreme Court the case may be appealed to the Supreme Court of the U. S. and Starkweather's attorneys have indicated they will do this.

Another stay of execution is granted by the U. S. Supreme Court until it disposes of the case. If its verdict is unfavorable to the defense, the case could be appealed through the federal court system.

One Nebraska murder case which was carried into the federal court system recently resulted in the order for a retrial. The original trial was concluded in 1954. The state has appealed the federal retrial order and the end is not yet in sight.

Illinois Town Braced for Floods

Streator, Ill. — (UPI) — This city of 17,000 battled its worst flood in history today in the wake of a fire and explosion that destroyed a four-story building, killing at least five persons and injuring 10.

Residents braced for even greater flood damage as authorities warned two giant crests were surging down the Vermillion river toward the city.

Torrential rains ranging up to six inches Monday triggered the floodwaters which threatened to knock out the city's water and sewage disposal plants. About 500 persons were evacuated from their flooded homes.

The floods also were blamed for a sewer gas explosion and fire that ripped apart the Williams Hardware Co. building in the business district.

Ashland Girl Receives Trophy in 4-H Pre-Fair

Ashland — Annette Drager was awarded the Ashland Hardware trophy for the top beef showman for the Ashland area at the annual Sis-Q 4-H club pre-fair at Bellview Grange hall recently.

More than 30 4-H'ers, parents and leaders participated in showmanship contests and viewed demonstrations on guide dogs, horsemanship and forestry. Members of the Ashland Rotary club were luncheon guests.

Microbes Found In Eastern Pine

Washington — (UPI) — Two microbes which cause a serious and sometimes fatal disease similar to tuberculosis have been discovered in the pollen of the eastern pine tree.

A chart prepared by VA showing the birthplaces of 1,200 veterans with the disease shows correlation between the tree and sarcoidosis.

Although sarcoidosis is not widely found in the United States, Dr. Cummings said VA research studies have shown that there are about five cases among each 100,000 hospitalized white veterans. The rate is about 50 among non-white veterans.

Dr. Martin M. Cummings, director of Veterans Administration research here, said two chemicals found in the wax of pine pollen are similar, if not identical, to materials found in sarcoidosis lesions.

VA research has come up with some interesting statistics on this disease. It has pre-

The Hollywood Scene

Hollywood — (UPI) — Anybody who says Hollywood has forgotten how to stage an all-out, frankly phony publicity stunt to sell a new movie obviously wasn't in San Francisco the other day.

The gimmick was inspired. The studio, 20th Century-Fox, decided to "sneak" with proper advertising, of course, its latest science fiction thriller, "The Fly."

To prove that this is the kind of movie makes the "House of Wax" and "Phantom of the Opera" a cup of weak tea by comparison, the studio decided to sprinkle a handful of monsters throughout the huge theater.

Unfortunately, it was necessary to import monsters. Eight young acting students answered the call and the makeup man had his hands full.

Too Scary for Monsters

"When a movie scares even a monster, it's really spme-thing," the publicity men argued.

It went off like clockwork. A short time after the Technicolor chiller starring Vincent Price began to take on nightmare aspects, the Wolf Man went up the theater screaming. It plainly was too much for him!

It wasn't clear just why the Hunchback of Notre Dame left the movie so early but some people suspected he had tired of his sub-teen-ager seatmates punching the basketball sized hump on his back which was enhanced by the red underwear he wore.

Spaceman's Air Disappears

The spaceman, meanwhile rocked his way out when an air hose failed to function and his face began to turn a little blue within its fish-bowl casing.

And it's just a wonder that Dracula was permitted to leave the movie house under his own steam. A couple of high school boys looked ready to wrap the vampire's black satin cape around him. "He's not going to kiss my girl on the neck again," one of them muttered.

Frankenstein, Dr. Jekyll, and the Ape Man left in a group.

"What a way to make a living," growled the Ape Man.

HOT DOG!

Chicago — (UPI) — The hot dog season is upon us. The American Meat Institute estimates that an average of over 25 million frankfurters a day will be eaten this summer. This amounts to a stomach-stretching total of 2 1/2 billion sausages between now and Labor day. Baseball fans, followed closely by backyard cooks, lead the hot dog parade.
