News and Notes From Camp White

By WILLIAM M. BLACK JR.

Four thousands years of progress dating from the earliest written history to today has brought men from demon possession to a six-point rehabilitation program. Some of the first written records deal with a problem that only today is being solved. Epilepsy or seizure disability is no longer a hide-in-the-dark word.

Here at Camp White the truth of the above statement is weekly being proved as a special therapy group operated by social work service in conjunction with medical specialists. This group consists of a continuously rotating membership and had a simple objective of six steps to rehabilitation.

The first is control of the seizures by a faithful adherence to a regularly prescribed course of medication, such as Dilantin. Secondly is the resumption of full activity, such as self-care. Next the members progress to a semi-arduous activity in a sheltered work routine. Fourthly, they go to a full time assignment which rebuilds physical strength and sharpens mental ability that has often been dulled by the seizures. The next step is from "sheltered" employment to full competitive activity using old skills or new ones learned in vocational training. The final move is to full and normal physical, emotional and social relationships.

According to R. E. Kelley, as clinical social worker, these objectives are reached by approximately 16 men annually although facilities at Camp White provide for the operation of only the one group.

What is being done at Camp White is duplicated many times over by other VA installations throughout the country. Every year thousands of men are returning to useful and productive lives despite what was once considered a curse by the gods.

A statistical study, "A Study of Younger Members at VA Domiliary, Camp White, Oregon," by Robert E. Kelley, chief, social work service, has been published in the Central Office Information Bulletin on social service work which was issued June 30. The paper dealt with rehabilitation of veterans between the ages of 25 and 45. Conclusions arrived at, during the study, showed that given opportunities for individual help and guidance nearly all were able to re-assume responsible positions in full or part-time employment according to limitations of the physical disabilities, represented by the cases studied.

Acting Manager Banks I. Paul announced the appointment of Willis Morrison as medical laboratory technician, replacing Ernest Hesser, who has joined the forest service. Morrison is being transferred from the Whipple, Ariz., VA center and will arrive at Camp White July 27.

Lawhorne, nee Love, has found the way. Mrs. Jean Lawhorne of Ojai, Calif., contacted her father, Arthur M. Love, by letter after 24 years of neither knowing where the other one was. The last time they had seen each other was in 1934. Mrs. Lawhorne was born in Ashland and lived near Medford until her mother and father separated. After Love's ex-wife remarried, he was never able to trace his daughter. Love has been a member at Camp White since

Aircraft Use of Airport Shows Decline in June

Aircraft landings and takeoffs at the Medford airport in June slumped nearly 12 per cent from last year's figure, according to the monthly report.

Passenger arrivals and departures were down 15 per cent and freight, 21 per cent. Mail traffic, on the other hand, rose 5 per cent and air express shipments rose slightly over 1 per cent.

Conversely, June's landings and takeoffs and passenger and freight traffic showed gains over the figures for May, while mail and air express were lower.

The landings and takeoffs in June included Air Force, 47; Navy, 10; commercial carrier, 929; and civil, including official and private planes, 1,437. There were 2,488 civil flights involving local planes, for a total of 4,911. The airport collected $2,345.01 in landing fees, according to the report.

The airport handled 6,593 passengers, 28,204 pounds of freight, 18,421 pounds of mail and 5,876 pounds of air express shipments in June.

Airport Manager Richard Hogan attributed the lower figures to nationwide economic conditions.

SYRACUSE BIG-LEAGUERS Syracuse, N. Y. — (UPI) — Two former Syracuse university baseball players are major leaguers this year. Pitcher Walt Craddock performs for the Kansas City Athletics and Dutch Dotterer catches for the Cincinnati Redlegs.

May, 1957. A reunion is planned for the very near future.

Miss Martha Stovall, chief librarian from Perry Point VA Hospital, Perry Point, Md., was a visitor at Camp White while on her way to the American Library association meeting in San Francisco.

Miss Stovall paid a call on her friend, Miss Gladys McCracken, chief dietitian, as well as visiting the Camp White library.

Miss Enid Holmes, chief librarian for Camp White, will be in San Francisco July 14-18 attending the American Library association annual meeting.

Miss Holmes also will meet with Mrs. Elizabeth Fontain, national director of the Hospitalized Veterans Writing project.

Owen C. (Malemute Slim) Gearhart Sr., has returned to his home on the Kenai peninsula in Alaska. "Malemute Slim" has written many articles on Alaska for the Camp White Dominions and for the Alaska Sportsman. He has promised to keep us informed of the progress towards statehood by Alaska.

Master Mariner Mart S. Hazen is leaving Camp White to live in Portland. Hazen is 85 years old and has more than 40 years of sailing and steamship experience as a first mate and captain. He also holds a master's license for the Columbia river and all its tributaries.

Captain Hazen's most memorable experience was during World War II when he outran a Japanese destroyer between Hong Kong and Singapore. The chase lasted for 72 hours and Hazen drew full bridge duty for the entire trip.

Hazen was Commander of the WWI Veterans, Barrack's 14, for two terms.

Sid Hollingsworth has gone on a 30-day furlough with an original destination of Fresno, Calif. Sid planned on spending several days visiting a former instructor, Dr. Margaret Bailey, and other friends at Southern Oregon college.

Camp White was host to one of Oregon's own top-flight bowlers, Stan Gifford. After a short introduction by Acting Manager Banks I. Paul, Gifford demonstrated good bowling techniques and the "how-to's" of knocking down splits to score spares.

Tom Mooney, Camp White member, and Gifford played two exhibition matches. Gifford has won two American Bowling Team titles and shares with Steve Nagy the distinction of being the only two men to score 300 while bowling under the lens of the TV camera. Gifford's next stop will be at the Seattle VAH.

Drivers Licenses Suspended Listed

Salem—The department of motor vehicles has released names of 344 drivers whose licenses were ordered suspended beginning July 7 and ending July 11.

The department warned drivers that the penalty for driving while suspended is a jail sentence of no less than two days and up to six months and there may be imposed a fine up to $500. Under licensing procedures, this will also result in an additional year of suspension.

Is That So?

Amman—The group agreed on only one thing about the six creatures we had just seen vanishing over a low rocky crest about half a mile away. They weren't gazelles.

I had been able to catch only the last of them in my glasses as they vanished over the skyline, and though I couldn't tell what they were, the others were positive in their opinions.

One of them said they were tahrs, a type of small, beardless goat generally found in the eastern part of the Arabian peninsula.

Another said they were ibex. He knew because of their light brown color and dark markings. Also, he had killed one once whose horns measured three feet along the curve.

A third swore they were oryx. He could tell by the horns that were not curved as on an ibex.

The argument was insoluble, of course, and though I saw no horns myself, I am inclined to favor an addax rather than any of the others.

Both the addax and the oryx are antelopes that are found in Arabia. They are approximately the same size, standing about three feet at the shoulder. Both have long horns and both travel in small bands, rarely more than 20 in all.

The oryx, however, is a whitish color, enough so from what I have heard and the skins I have seen — for me to have picked them out against the drab, stony slope.

In contrast, the addax is of a generally brownish-gray to reddish color that blends in nicely with his desert surroundings. There is white on him, both on his face and hindquarters, but not enough to be of major significance at a distance to any but another addax.

Furthermore, the addax is said to have a greater ability to go without water than other antelopes. According to some accounts, their ability in this respect is enough to put a camel to shame. The Arabs say they travel over the deserts in the wake of thunder showers drinking the water left in rock crevices and eating the herbage that springs up in their wake.

Regardless of the truth of that, it is undoubtedly correct that the wildlife of the desert knows of water resources not known to man. In so vast and lightly populated a land mass as Arabia, anything else is unthinkable.
