Stock Market Seen Higher, Lower on Various Yardsticks

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor
New York—The Stock Market during the past week was higher, lower, or steady—according to what yardstick one used.

The Market was higher in the Dow-Jones Averages, except utilities. Industrials closed the week at 486.55, up 3.70, and rails 213.31, up 2.97—both new highs for the year. Utilities lost 1.19 to 79.36 and the 65 stocks gained 1.09 to 168.54.

The Market was lower in the gains and losses registered. Of the 1,418 issues traded, 700 declined while 576 gained and 142 held unchanged. During the trading 230 hit new highs and 19 made new lows.

The Market was steady in the Standard and Poor's index of 500 stocks which closed at 45.77, up 5 cents a share. Brisk Trading he trading was active or normal, according to which issues you measured. Sales for the week of 15,415,140 shares—a daily average of 3,083,028—were the most for any full week this year. If you remove 20 actives, which made up 18 per cent of the trading, you get back to routine. It was a Market influenced almost entirely by the Middle East situation. Iraq's coup on Monday sent international oil prices down sharply and brought selling into the entire list.

The subsequently recovery which was accompanied by a 3,000,000-share pace, reflected the moves of the government to send troops to Lebanon and the implications that go with such a venture.

Inflation ruled the trading. Meantime, the Government was having difficulty with its bond market where not long ago speculators received a severe drubbing when they tried to take free rides on a long-term issue of bonds.

The speculators were hard put to sell their bonds at a loss and the treasury stepped in to mop off the leftovers. It bought some 600 million dollars of its bonds and that seemed to set things right.

Then it announced a refunding and new money operation for next week, running into 16 billion dollars and more trouble started even though the offering was in line with what the bond men said was reasonable—one year certificates bearing 1 1/2 per cent interest.

On Friday the Market came into new difficulty and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York announced that contrary to custom it would be in the Market to buy long-term as well as short term issues to support prices.

That action of the Reserve is seen as a highly inflationary device. It is compared to printing press money for it introduces much more credit into the stream than it buys in the open market.

Market Jolted
Despite the inflationary situation with no one wanting government bonds with their fixed interest coupons, the stock market got a jolt on the Federal Reserve's unprecedented announcement. It looked bad to the Market and it lost little time in selling.

In the remaining 20 minutes of trading Friday the Market fell three points from its high, but managed to close up slightly on average. During the week the tendency of the list was toward the so-called war babies—(we might have to supply Europe with oil again if the Middle East cracks down which it hasn't), aircrafts, steels, rails (to move the war material to seaboard), metals. International oils got a severe drubbing but regained some of their losses.

Counterfeit Ring Reported Broken
Fort Worth, Tex. —UPI—Secret Service agents and Fort Worth police have cracked what they described as a nation-wide counterfeiting ring. Police said Saturday they expected charges to be filed against two suspects, who listed their occupations as gamblers, by U. S. Treasury Department agents.

The men, one from Las Vegas, Nev., and the other from Reno, were questioned at police headquarters after being nabbed Friday.

Police said at least two other persons—including one woman—are still at large. The ring is suspected of passing bogus $20 bills in supermarkets, drug stores and department stores in Dallas, Fort Worth, Denver, Reno and Amarillo, Tex. Police said the gang had passed a "considerable amount" of the phony bills in the Dallas-Fort Worth vicinity during the last few weeks.

Both suspects were carrying counterfeit bills, police said.

New Pacific Ocean Park Slated Opens in Santa Monica Tuesday

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International
Santa Monica, Calif.—UPI—New Pacific Ocean Park, 28 acres of maritime magic which opens Tuesday, has helped do something just as important as creating fun:

It has helped spark the renovation of the blighted area along the shore south of here.

City officials had been trying, without much success, to spur a renewal project along the coastal strip, which, until about a year ago, resembled a poor man's Atlantic City.

Then the owners of the new family entertainment center—the Los Angeles Turf Club (Santa Anita) and the Columbia Broadcasting system—acquired the property formerly occupied by rundown Ocean Park, a similar but much less ambitious project.

Construction of the new park began, and business picked up rapidly. The prospect of 2,225,000 tourist visitors to the park the first year, an estimate made by General Manager Ben A. O'Dorisio, upgraded property values.

A Delight for All
The park itself will delight youngsters of all ages.

Set on the sparkling white Santa Monica beach and affording a panoramic view of the Malibu mountains and the Pacific ocean, it offers something for the whole family.

For the children, there are the usual rides, plus special excursions on Polynesian boats and simulated trips to Mars, the Enchanted Forest, Neptune's Kingdom and a South Sea Island.

Adults, in addition to enjoying the rides with their children, will be able to partake of the sophisticated flavor of the International Promenade, a tree-lined boulevard of restaurants and shops, still under construction.

And at night, in addition to the regular doings, there will be dancing to Lawrence Welk and his orchestra in the adjacent Aragon ballroom.

The park will be open the year round from 10 a.m. to midnight. Admission for adults is 90 cents; for juniors, 70 cents; children, 50 cents. Neptune's Kingdom and the Sea Circus are among the major free attractions.

By The Sea
Most of the problems confronting the park were solved quickly because of the owners' choice of location.

"We dug three 65-foot wells into the ocean to supply the water for our outdoor sea circus tanks," O'Dorisio said. "There are 515,000 gallons of water in one of the tanks."

This is the tank in which camera bugs will have a field day as they are lowered in one of two diving bells to take pictures of underwater life.

O'Dorisio feels that the beach location will help the park's business immeasurably. "People like to go to the beach anyway," he said, "and when they do, here we are."

As an extra added attraction along the Promenade, O'Dorisio and Jaynes have ordered the remodeling of an old speakeasy which was a Prohibition-era hangout of movie stars who had their homes nearby.

The club will be decked out in the style of the Roaring Twenties and will show silent movies with piano accompaniment. There will be a Dixieland band and even a host to whom you will have to whisper "Joe sent me" in order to get in.

Goldfine's Son Taken to Hospital

Sarasota, Fla.—UPI—H. Maxwell Goldfine, 36, son of Boston industrialist Bernard Goldfine, was admitted to a local hospital Saturday for treatment of "between 80 and 100" self-inflicted razor blade cuts over a large portion of his body.

Physicians at Memorial hospital reported that he lost much blood but added that his condition was "good." They said all the cuts were superficial and did not require stitching.

Police were called to the motel where Goldfine and his wife were staying early yesterday when the manager reported a disturbance. Patrolman Donald G. Elie said he found Mrs. Goldfine alarmed when he reached the motel. She told him her husband had locked himself in the bathroom and she was afraid he would take his own life.

Elie, a personal friend of Goldfine, knocked on the bathroom door and asked Goldfine to come out. Elie said Goldfine was reluctant at first but finally opened the door. Goldfine was clothed in a pair of blood-spattered shorts when he came out, Elie said.

The patrolman said Goldfine admitted cutting himself with the razor but declined to give a reason. Elie said Goldfine had cuts on most areas of his body, "even his face."

FIRE CHIEF SETS FIRE
Nara, Japan—UPI—Volunteer fire chief Masayuki Onishi, angered that citizens in his small farming village refused to donate money for a new water tank, set fire to the barn of the leader of the opposition, sounded the alarm and then directed the fire-fighting. Police found him out.
