The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. F. E. — Loraine is too shy.

Loraine E. — I don't feel like going out anyway.

Mrs. F. E. — I want to help my 16-year-old daughter who is having boy trouble—maybe I should call it lack-of-boy trouble.

Most girls of her age have gone out quite a bit, but Loraine has only had two or three dates in her whole life. She is a nice-looking girl, but she lacks confidence and is much too shy. I tell her she must speak up and she should not be afraid of approaching boys and talking to them, but she seems to hang back like a child when she meets boys.

There was a particular boy she liked and I told her she should go right over to him and start a conversation and hint there was a particular movie in the neighborhood she wanted to see. She came home in tears and said he did not pay the least attention to her.

Loraine E. — I'm never going to pay any attention to Mother again. She tells me to do the craziest things. They don't work out the way she says they will.

This boy looked at me as though I was crazy when I suddenly stalked over to him out of the blue and started blabbing about this movie. I am getting so sick and discouraged about this whole thing I just don't feel like going out, anyway. I know I freeze up when I am with boys, but I can't help it. If they don't pay any attention to me, I'm not even going to look at them.

It doesn't do me any good to talk to Mother about my problems because she starts yelling at me for being shy and backward. Then I hate myself for it, but I go on being the same way.

Goldfine Delay Irks Probers

Washington — (UPI) — Some members of the House influence-investigating subcommittee today chafed at the delay in voting to recommend a contempt of Congress citation for Boston millionaire Bernard Goldfine.

Rep. John J. Flynt Jr. (D-Ga.), said he "can't understand" what is holding up subcommittee action against Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams' gift-giving friend.

Rep. John B. Bennett (D-Mich.) said Goldfine should be cited promptly. He said the subcommittee has "nothing left to do" in the case but vote.

Subcommittee Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.) excused Goldfine as a witness last Thursday after giving him a final chance to answer 23 carefully worded questions about his involved financial dealings.

Goldfine replied—as he had repeatedly in the face of contempt citation threats—that the questions were not relevant to the subcommittee's investigation into his alleged influence-for-favors relationship with Adams.

Machete Wielder Much, Much Wiser

Mobile, Ala. — (UPI) — Machete wielder Carl H. Watson inflicted more damage on himself than on the swarm of wasps he encountered.

Watson, forester for the local school board, was surveying a wooded tract where the county plans to build a school. He was using a machete to trim away branches. The heavy knife slashed through a wasp nest and the angry insects attacked.

Watson fought back, swinging away with the machete. Finally he broke free. He was released from the hospital Wednesday, minus quite a bit of blood and the tip of one finger but, as he put it, "much, much wiser."

Elephants are driven by their ears, says the National Geographic magazine. The mahout, or master, sits on the beast's neck and conveys his orders by pressing with knees, toes, or heels on the elephant's ear fans or shoulders. Using no words at all, he makes his mount amble forward, wheel right or left, pick up things, go into reverse, break off an interfering branch, kneel, salute, stop, look, or listen.

The Council — Mrs. F. E. can help her daughter by trying to be a bit calmer and more detached about this problem. Out of love for her daughter she is going overboard and sharing all the girl's own emotions.

She is hurt, humiliated and angry that Loraine's encounters with boys are not successful and she intensifies these feelings in the girl.

Because she is so identified with Loraine's problems, Mrs. F. E. tries to act out various situations as she imagines they ought to be. She would like to walk up to that boy herself and take charge of the situation from then on.

But she can't do that. Loraine has to do it out of her own impulses and in her own way. She makes a mess of such a situation because she is acting a role that doesn't even come out of her own imagination.

If Mrs. F. E. will take a step back and look at the problem, she will see things are not so terribly serious. Loraine shows she wants to meet boys and is merely going through some of the difficulties of finding her way in a new country. Some girls seem to know the right routes almost from birth. Most have to learn them and some never do, but a girl who wants to find it as much as Loraine appears to will eventually have some success.

In the meantime, Mrs. F. E. should try to get Loraine to calm down and to join clubs and church groups where she can meet boys in a relaxed atmosphere.

She should be encouraged to be active in everything that interests her. Gradually she will find herself making friends without even thinking about it.
