

FREE METHODIST CHURCH Building Dedicated in 1957

Free Methodist Pastor Receives New Assignment

The Rev. J. M. Root, pastor of Free Methodist church here for the past four years, will leave Medford next week for Vancouver, Wash., where he will assume duties as pastor of the Free Methodist church there.

Arriving here to replace Mr. Root will be the Rev. E. C. Bush of Cottage Grove, Ore. The ministers were assigned at the recent state meeting of the Free Methodist church conference.

During Mr. Root's pastorate in Medford the Free Methodist church sold its property at Tenth and Ivy sts. to the re-organized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and built the first section of a proposed building at 1294 South Peach st. The membership has increased to more than 75 members with a $10,000 annual budget. The Washington church where Mr. Root will assume duties as pastor has a membership of less than 50, it was reported.

Prior to arriving in Medford, Mr. Root was in Boise, Idaho, Portland and Hawaii in evangelist work with the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Root traveled to Oakland, Calif., to visit one of their sons, Capt. Robert Root, who is stationed with the U. S. Army, after they were notified of their transfer. While there they were joined by a son-in-law.

CHURCH NEWS National Religious Publicity Council

By LOUIS CASSELS United Press International

The recession has put a crimp in America's church building boom.

But it's not a very big crimp. By every standard except last year's all-time record, new church construction is still proceeding at a phenomenal pace.

The Commerce Department reports 389 million dollars was spent on religious construction during the first half of 1958. That represents a drop of about 3 per cent from the 400-million-dollar outlay recorded during the first half of 1957.

Government economists attribute the drop to the tight money market, the high interest rates and the general uncertainty about future economic conditions that prevailed last winter.

Past experience undergirds the assumption the decline will be temporary. Church building has set new records every year since the end of World War II. The annual outlay climbed from 77 million dollars in 1946 to 775 million dollars in 1956 — an increase of 1,000 per cent over a 10-year period. In 1957, the full-year total was 866 million dollars.

Behind the building boom are two factors: The sharp rise in U. S. church membership since the war, and the great population shift from the cities to the suburbs.

The latter factor has been the more important of the two. If every existing church were being used to capacity, major religious denominations could have accommodated their postwar increase in membership with only a fraction of the new building they have had to undertake.

Downtown Churches Empty But in virtually every city today there are large downtown churches whose average Sunday attendance hardly fills the back pews. And out in the suburbs there are hundreds of congregations holding services in movie theaters, school auditoriums and other makeshift quarters. There is no sign the churches are nearing the saturation point in their far-flung suburban building campaigns.

The Methodist church, the nation's largest Protestant denomination, concluded after a recent survey that it will have to build at least one new church a day for the next 10 years just to keep pace with suburban growth.

At a meeting in Detroit last February, officials of 34 major denominations arrived at an estimate that 2,000 new churches will be needed each year for the foreseeable future.

If this estimate proves anywhere near accurate, it is likely the annual outlay for church construction will top the billion dollar mark by 1959 or 1960.

Expected

During 1957 only two churches, Free Methodist and Mt. Pitt Avenue Church of the Nazarene, were completed in the six-month period with a third, First Church of the Nazarene, completing a remodeling program.

At the present time churches are being constructed by Medford Seventh-day Adventist, Bethel Assembly of God, St. Luke's Methodist, and Pilgrim Holiness. During this period Open Bible Standard church completed their structure.

Ninety Valley Witnesses Leave for New York Meet

Limited Programs Scheduled Here During East Event

About 90 of Jehovah's Witnesses from the Medford and Central Point congregations will attend an international convention in New York City July 27 through August 3.

T. R. Thompson, presiding minister of the Medford congregation, in announcing the plans of the local delegates, said a limited program of meetings will be held in the Kingdom hall, 2402 Jacksonville highway, since most of those in charge of various features will be attending the Christian assembly. R. C. Wood, an assistant minister, will be in charge of the local group during the convention. Chartered Planes, Train, Boat Valley residents attending the convention are traveling East by various modes of transportation. Part of the group left Medford for Portland where they boarded chartered airplanes and trains. Others left earlier for San Francisco where they embarked by chartered boat for New York City via the Panama Canal. Many of the local delegation drove across country.

Thompson said that the local delegates attending the international gathering will benefit greatly not only from the rich spiritual provisions, but also from Christian association with Witnesses from foreign lands. The convention, he said, will further the understanding and good will among the various races and nationalities of Jehovah's Witnesses, and will also demonstrate to the world how the Bible message and Christian living can unite people from all walks of life, regardless of race or other backgrounds that tend to divide the world.

Expected Attendance When questioned about the expected attendance, Watchtower officials in New York pointed to the record attendance of 165,000 at the 1953 international convention in New York city's Yankee stadium. At that time several overflow areas provided space for the Witnesses and interested persons. Yankee stadium has again been secured, but because of the cramped quarters of the previous assembly the Polo grounds will be used in addition. The program will be presented by the same participants following the first presentation in Yankee stadium.

Most of those from the local congregations will be staying in private homes in New York City and nearby areas. All hotel accommodations will be filled, according to the Watchtower rooming committee, and the majority of attendees will be placed in homes following a gigantic house - to - house effort to find available accommodations.
