Huge Balloon Soars Into Sky With Two Scientists Aboard

Crosby, Minn. —(UPI)— A huge plastic balloon soared aloft Saturday, bearing two scientists, 5,000 insects and a maze of scientific instruments.

Two veteran spacemen, Cmdr. Malcolm D. Ross, 38, and retired Cmdr. M. Lee Lewis, 45, planned to go up 17 miles to the fringe of outer space, before easing the 17-story high balloon to earth late Sunday.

At 2:42 a.m. (PDT) the balloon, dangling a sealed and pressurized gondola, was cut loose from its launching site in a 400-foot deep open pit mine. It soared up at a rate between 1,000 and 2,000 feet per minute in what U. S. Navy spokesmen described as "a perfect launch."

As the balloon began its ascent, a tracking plane and tracking van swung into operation, following the craft's westward course toward North Dakota.

The first radio contact came as the balloon reached 740 feet, and Ross and Lewis, began to rattle off a series of readings from the instruments.

A short while later, the pilot of a commercial airline made contact with the balloon. Ross responded to the call with a genial, "what do you say, kid?"

The launching had been scheduled for last Wednesday but high winds and foul weather cancelled the repeated attempts. Last minute technical problems delayed the scheduled midnight launching Saturday, and Ross and Lewis spent the final hours in a pressurized van at the take-off point while technicians swarmed about the balloon. Just before takeoff the men entered the gondola, which has an artificial atmosphere of the type which would be used in a manned satellite.

They will study the effects of the stratosphere and cosmic radiations on themselves and the insects that are sharing the flight. They also will make observations of Mars. The vehicle was expected to reach its peak of 84,000 feet within two hours after the launching, level off and remain aloft through Saturday night returning to earth this morning.

Three men entered pleas of innocent Friday to charges of vagrancy and threat of violence against employees of the White King Mine at a hearing before Justice of the Peace O. C. Gibbs here.

The men, Lawrence Bays, Davey Graham, and Arnold Holmes, were represented by their attorney, Robert Welch. A request for separate trials was denied by the judge, who also overruled Welch's demurrer to the complaint.

Sheriff's deputies and Lakeview city police arrested the men here Tuesday after they allegedly threatened non-union workers at the mine. Trial Date Set

Judge Gibbs set the jury trial date for 10 a.m. July 31. Union members called a strike against the mine operations of the Lakeview mining company July 20 after the company had refused to recognize the union as bargaining agent for the workers.

The company refused to recognize the union on the grounds that many of the present employees are working on a temporary basis and it would be "unfair" to future employees who would be bound by an agreement that they didn't have an opportunity to vote on.

A restraining order aimed at the striking union members was issued Wednesday by Circuit Judge Charles Foster. The order prohibits union members from threatening violence against non-union members who are still working.

Prices Advance In Lumber Market

Rapidly advancing prices in green fir dimensions and boards has caused the sharpest increase in Crow's Lumber Price Index since early May, according to Crow's.

Production has remained low this month, due to mill vacation shutdowns, while the demand from the east and midwest has continued at a relatively high level due to an upturn in housing starts, Crow's said.

The sudden increase in the demand for boards has come as a result of higher plywood sheathing prices, according to Crow's, and is expected to remain at a high point until the critical shortage of plywood is eased.

Random Lengths, Eugene reports that Fir and Hemlock dimension, both green and kiln dried, was attracting a volume of business at the mills with the buyers primarily interested in specific lengths commonly used in homebuilding. The market for random dimensions has improved but it lags a step behind the demand for specified lengths, the report states.

ADLAI IN ASIA London (UPI)— Moscow Radio reported Friday night that former Democratic Party presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson has arrived at the central Asian city of Novosibirsk in his tour of the Soviet Union.

Address Meeting—Emerson Smith, (above) field executive of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be in Medford Tuesday consulting with local realtors and other businessmen, according to Cap Vandergrift, president of the Medford Realty board. Smith is slated to address a meeting of the board at the Jackson hotel while he is here, Vandergrift said.
