

Maloney Indictment Ordered Dismissed

Portland—UPI—A conspiracy indictment against Thomas P. Maloney, Spokane race-track figure who was linked with the Portland vice and corruption probe, has been dismissed by President Judge James R. Bain.

Assistant Attorney General Arthur C. Higgs said the bribery conspiracy indictment involved the same set of circumstances of the companion charge against Maloney that was tried last year. He was found not guilty on the earlier charge.

One count remains against Maloney. That is a charge of

Two Youths Arrested By State Police

Two 18-year-old Central Point youths were arrested Tuesday in connection with the theft of tools from a logging operator, state police reported.

Being held in county jail in lieu of $1,500 bail were James Lee Gleason, 18, of 1800 Taylor rd., Central Point, and Norman Jay Nutter, 18, also of 1800 Taylor rd., Central Point. They are charged with taking tools from John Julius Paul, logging operator, some time in March.

Arresting officers involved in the case are

Navy Man Injured In City Accident

Birchill Houston Codgel, 23, serving aboard the USS Mathews, San Francisco, was treated at Sacred Heart hospital Tuesday morning for lacerations received in an accident at the intersection of West Sixth st. and North Oakdale ave.

Codgel, according to Medford city police, was the passenger in a car operated by Charles Van Dusen Jr., 21, also of the USS Mathews, San Francisco. Operator of the other vehicle involved was John William Morrison, 78, of 126 Catherine st., Medford. Morrison was cited by police for failing to yield right of way.

Codgel, who was taken to the hospital by Medford Ambulance service, was released after treatment, according to hospital officials.

Skin-Testing for Food Allergy

I am always pleased when I find an able skin specialist saying that the commonly made skin tests with foods are usually of no value to him, as when he is hunting for the cause of hives. Some 35 years ago I learned that skin tests might be of some value when I was hunting for the cause of a hay fever or an asthma, but when I was hunting for the cause of some food-sensitivity, these tests so rarely helped me that I quit using them. Skin tests for foods rarely were used at the Mayo Clinic in the years when I was there, and long ago many prominent skin specialists and allergists quit using them (for foods).

I was just re-reading a fine article by Dr. Adolph Rostenberg, Jr., of Chicago, who, while discussing hives, said that skin tests for foods are generally worthless. A reason for this may be that when a person eats some food to which he is sensitive, some chemical in the food combines with some part of his blood, or stirs up his blood to form a poison which then irritates his skin. The watery food extracts, such as are made for skin-testing, do not contain the hypothetical combined chemical which produces the hives.

Years ago, I had as a patient a man who taught me much in regard to the puzzling nature of some allergies. He was a baker in a small shop where, for much of the day, his hands and arms were in contact with dough. Although the contact with wheat caused the man's arms to break out with a bad rash, he was not allergic to wheat because he could breathe flour all day, and he could eat all the bread he liked without getting either asthma or indigestion. I, myself, present a curious
