Liebman Tells of $300 Million Bridge Planned To Link Areas

By JERRY LIEBMAN (One of a series)

I wish that I had had some coffee with me to give my host. There is no coffee here. Imagine a Turk without his Turkish coffee! Soap can be found, but of a very poor quality. In Istanbul I gave the hotel maid a cake of soap and she marveled at its softness.

I am writing my notes on paper I bought in Greece, having been warned of the paper shortage in Turkey. All these things offer good hints for travelers to bring with them as gifts.

great power of Menderes but no one can say. There is no feeling as yet of an organized effort to oust or control him. The country heard a buzz of talk recently in Ankara because they were organizing a coup. This may have been only "bazaar talk," as rumors are known here. Certainly nothing could be read of this in the newspapers because they, of necessity, have been silent.

My Turkish friends in Istanbul are quite guarded in their opinions of Menderes but since they own the largest ship yards in Turkey I am sure they want to be cautious. I have heard admiration of Menderes' strength as a man and of the fact that he works strenuously. It is a hard fact in it that it often takes dictatorial powers to accomplish modernization of a nation quickly. De Gaulle of France might be asked back to govern that sad country with full powers for just such reasons.

The people of Turkey tend to glorify Menderes by associating his name with that of Kemal Ataturk, the founder of the country at the end of World War I. It is useful for Menderes to foster this impression.

Good is coming of it all, however. The lot of the man in the street is becoming better despite small irritations. It could have been much better without the mistakes of the present regime, however. In the opinion of my Istanbul friends, it will take Turkey 50 years to overcome the effects of the present misguided industrialization.

Plans for Bridge

For example, the government has just announced a $300 million bridge across the Bosphorus that will link Europe to Asia. This obviously is to be no more than a grand symbol of Turkey's progress, since there is little need for such a bridge, Turkey having no more than 150 thousand vehicles. The government is asking approximately the same amount as the cost of the bridge in aid from America, which makes it something of a scandal.

Stories in Istanbul have it that a German bid on the same bridge using a carefully engineered new design came in at half the cost of that accepted from U. S. Steel. The American bid was accepted as a gesture to the United States.

It seems curious that Menderes invites experts from other countries to consult with him and yet so obstinately refuses their hire advice.

This has been true of dam construction, for example. The experts advised him to build only the few dams the economy would allow. The Premier pushed ahead a program authorizing almost four times as many dams.

Being Dictator

To face facts, it would seem that Menderes is rapidly becoming a dictator. It is annoying that the U.S. has to countenance such a condition but our NATO defenses demand it.

Menderes just recently banned a newspaper from publishing during a one-month period for having published an editorial, "Menderes, His Discourtesy to Parliament." A regulation which the Premier caused to be adopted takes the importing of paper stock from the hands of the individual publishers. This lever and the fact that all advertising is parceled out to the newspaperers from a government office gives Menderes life and death control over editors. If the editor publishes an unfavorable article or criticism, his newspaper receives no advertising or newsprint for that month.

I have been asked if nothing is being done about the too

Postcards cost more themselves than the price of the stamps to air mail them to the United States. These shortages have come about because of the intense modernization and industrialization schemes of Premier Menderes—schemes that many observers feel are being pushed too fast and with the wrong emphasis.
