Jacksonville Council Sees Hope In Interim Ordinance on Dump

While garbage steadily accumulates in the City Sanitary Service's new dump, Jacksonville shows no sign of relenting in its battle against the dump's presence so near its city limits.

"The city council and the mayor are absolutely opposed to the dump," John F. Keaveny, mayor of Jacksonville, said yesterday. "The people of Jacksonville are opposed to it, and we are acting in their interest."

Mayor Keaveny emphasized that closing of the town's "junk" dump on Sterling Creek rd. last week was no acknowledgment of the permanency of the Sanitary Service dump. He said the dump was closed because its operation had been criticized at recent county planning commission hearings and because its capacity had become insufficient to meet the needs of users from all over the county.

The council last night agreed that Jacksonville's hopes still ride on establishment of an interim county zoning ordinance under which the Sanitary Service could be enjoined from using the dump. Two attorneys for residents in the area represented differing views on the effectiveness of such an ordinance.

Ervin Hogan, city attorney of Jacksonville, said the main effect of an interim zoning ordinance would be to prevent the Sanitary Service from spreading its operations beyond the particular dump pits in use at the time the ordinance was passed. But, others agree, it would be difficult to prevent the service from continuing its work in areas already in use.

Walter D. Nunley, an attorney for certain residents living in Jacksonville and in the area near the dump, said he could cite cases to support enjoining the Sanitary Service from operating in the area at all.

The first view admits what is known as the doctrine of "prior and consistent use," whereby the Sanitary Service could not be enjoined under a zoning ordinance from continuing to operate where it had previously been operating.

But, according to Nunley, such use "in the face of pending action," namely the planning commission's recommendation of prohibitive zoning, could be considered "not in good faith." This would hold true if the service's operations were proved to be an effort to establish "prior and consistent use" so as to escape the effects of the ordinance.

Hogan said a second alternative was possible, that of charging the dump with being a "public nuisance" without reference to zoning. This could be based on air pollution, for example. But Nunley considered this measure valueless, since to create such a nuisance the damage they wished to prevent would have to occur.

Both Mayor Keaveny and Nunley charged the Sanitary Service with failing to give sufficient public notification. Mayor Keaveny said Jacksonville received its first notice of the dump's establishment June 5. This notice, a letter from the Sanitary Service, only stated he said that a dump would begin operation sometime later in the summer.

Holmes Sees End of Strike

Portland—(UPI)—Gov. Robert D. Holmes expressed "high hopes" early today that the nearly four-week-old strike-lockout involving the Operating Engineers and the Associated General Contractors would be settled at Thursday's negotiating session here.

The Governor made the statement from Salem where he returned after meeting with both groups separately.

Portland Mayor Terry D. Schunk joined the Governor in urging the two sides to reach a speedy settlement. He also attended the meetings.

Gov. Holmes said that he thought "the two parties were reasonably close to a settlement." But he did not indicate that either faction had altered its stand on the issues.

Gov. Holmes left early today for a trip to Alaska where he will meet with business men to promote more trade between the new state and Oregon, and will not be available for Thursday's meeting.

Break in Coppers Brings Stocks Down

New York—(UPI)—A break in copper shares brought stocks down in the late trading today.

A cut in copper metal prices brought a decline into that group and adversely affected other sectors of the market.

Copper shares late in the day registered losses ranging to more than two points in Kennecott and Anaconda. Aluminum issues also fell with losses there ranging to more than a point.

A cut in the copper price by a custom smelter set off the selling which developed such momentum near closing that tickers ran late. They had been late at the opening with prices steady.

The tape was four minutes behind floor transactions as the close approached.

The market was particularly sensitive to price items in view of government concern over recent price advances.
