Holmes To Make Economic Visit To Alaska Cities

Salem —UPI— Gov. Robert D. Holmes is scheduled to leave Wednesday on a flying, economic-goodwill trip to key cities of Alaska.

The trip is part of a plan for mutual expansion of Oregon and the new state-to-be. Congresswoman Edith also shared in the plan.

The governor met with representatives of Oregon port, marine, shipper and business interests in Portland today seeking new ideas or expanding ties between the two areas.

Conferences Planned
In Juneau, Anchorage and Fairbanks the Governor will confer with business and territorial leaders on expansion of the joint program.

With the governor will be Anthony Brandenthaler, chairman of the Oregon Centennial Commission, and Ivan Block, industrial consultant for the State Department of Planning and Development.

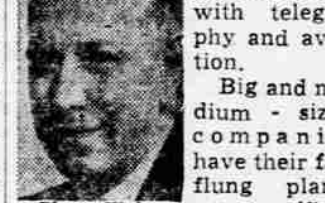

The Governor arrives at Juneau at 11:15 a.m. Wednesday. He continues to Anchorage at 12:45 p.m. the following day. He then arrives at Fairbanks Friday.

The Governor said he hopes his trip would "bring into focus" the growing possibilities of commerce between Oregon and Alaska.

Business Flying Seen As One Of Fastest Growing Segments

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

New York —UPI— Decentralization of industry goes on at an accelerating rate with the maze of plants cemented together with telegraphy and aviation.

Big and medium-sized companies have their far-flung plants and offices connected in a growing number of instances with their private teletype systems which keep the central office informed of all developments and help maintain a continuity of policy.

Busy executives make speedy trips to this or that plant by airplane when their presence is needed. And the planes in many instances are company owned and operated.

The airplane phase of business is getting to be big business in itself. It's bigger than scheduled commercial airlines, and the future holds the prospect of increased growth.

The current "Investor" sees business flying as the fastest growing segment of aviation today.

Business aircraft last year, it notes, logged 5 million hours. This was 25 per cent more than 4 million hours of all scheduled airlines.

Climbing Higher
The total, the magazine predicted, should soar to near 6 million hours by 1960 and to at least 10 million hours by 1975.

"By 1965, Investor says, more than half of all the hours flown in general aviation will be for business use."

"The wide range of business operation currently using aircraft includes manufacturing, merchandising, banking, construction, finance, transportation, utilities, mining, oil production, farming and ranching."

The magazine finds many things working in favor of business flying — continued industrial dispersion with plants located at off-airways sites; general optimism of businessmen and the expectation of continued high profit levels; increasing sectional competition; realization by companies that they can keep travel time of high-salaried executives at a minimum by air travel.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration finds there has been a shift from single-engine, two-place units to the longer, single-engine models of four to five places and to the small twin-engine executive aircraft as well.

Makers of the small aircraft look for a big market ahead for executive purposes. Some of the bigger companies are eyeing the executive market, Grumman, for example, plans to bring out this month its Gulfstream turboprop executive transport — its first entry into commercial aviation since the Korean war.

The investor also sees a big potential in the rent-a-plane operation, being given impetus by entry there of the big rent-a-car companies, such as Hertz and Avis.

Typical rates for a customer-piloted rental of a four-passenger plane, according to Hertz, would be approximately $18 a day, plus 13 cents per flight mile.

At those rates a 500-mile trip for a four-some of executives would cost about $80.

Merlin Area People Seek Water District

Grants Pass — Residents of the proposed Merlin division irrigation district met last week to elect temporary officers so a public meeting can be called.

A meeting was tentatively set for Aug. 13 at the North Pacific Grange hall, Temporary Chairman Debbs Potts reported.

It is hoped, according to Potts, that a full discussion of the proposed district and how it would fit into the Rogue River Basin project will be possible at the meeting.

Other officers of the temporary organization, tentatively named "Merlin Division Water Resources Committee," are J. V. George, secretary, and Kenneth Jackson, treasurer.

A. L. Irwin, H. E. Brunner, Lyle VanGordon, Norval Smith, Frank Taylor, Floyd Bates, Boyd G. Hixson, and Larry Basey will work on publicity and public relations, it was decided.

Vandalism Cases Reported to Sheriff

Jackson county sheriff's officers are investigating two cases of vandalism within the last few days, according to Joe Walsh, chief deputy.

A Grants Pass man reported that vandals started his tractor, ran the battery down, and burned out the clutch either Sunday or Monday. Vandals also took five gallons of gas and some five gallon cans of grease from the logging site six miles north of Applegate.

Vandals also pulled a hose off a grader motor, pulled wires off the distributor and let air out of the grader tires. The grader was on the road to Fish Lake, according to the owner, Emil Unger, 3731 Crater Lake highway.
