Teen-Age Drivers Used in Studies

Denver — (UPI) — Driving records of 7,000 Denver teenagers will be used to test results of a psychological study of bad traffic habits. The aim: to see if habitual violators can be predetermined.

Dr. Robert V. Rainey of the Colorado University Medical Center found repeating violators among military servicemen showed a pattern of emotional hotheadedness.

He wants to check these results in a four-year study of teenagers, starting when they are 15 years of age and continuing through their early motoring careers.

Rainey told a recent safety conference the habitual violators who had a high accident rate as a rule felt they were better drivers than persons with more normal records.

He said the servicemen, ranging in age from 18 to 40, appeared to be more interested in their own satisfactions.

He added: "They were less conventional than the other (non-violator) group. And they responded to traffic situations on a highly emotional level."

Rainey concluded: "They were men who couldn't stop to count to 10."

Psychologist Rainey warns that the results with the teenagers may be different, as might be similar studies conducted with other age groups and occupations.

LEGS ON PARADE
Hong Kong — (UPI) — Girls with shapely legs will parade before a panel of judges Friday night for the first time in Hong Kong's history. The contest, sponsored by a motion picture organization and an airline, is to find the "nicest" pair of legs among 24 contestants.
