OSC Gets $10,000 Grant for Research On Air Pollution

Corvallis—A new phase of research on ways to reduce the amount of smoke and cinders given off by the tepee-type wood waste burners used by sawmills and plywood mills will begin this month at Oregon State college. A $10,000 air pollution research grant has been received from the U.S. public health service to continue work started last year with a $12,000 grant. Studies the past year by the engineering experiment station showed that great reductions in smoke and cinder discharge are possible with minor burner design changes and with improved maintenance and operation of burners.

Best Size Burner

This year, the OSC engineers will run tests to determine the best size burner for various size mills and to study different aspects of "overfire" and "underfire" air entry and requirements for best burning.

Milosh Popovich, assistant dean of engineering, is project leader. Working with him are engineering staff members Martin E. Northcraft and George E. Thornburgh. A tepee-type wood waste burner has been built near the campus for the trials.

Little information is available at present on what size burner is needed to handle different volumes of wastes, Popovich said, and the new OSC study will provide such a guide.

It also is expected to give more information on burner operation that will cut air pollution and boost burner efficiency, he continued. The usual conclusion that "too small a burner" is responsible for excessive smoke and cinders often does not prove out, Popovich noted. Poor operation and design are big problems.

Changes in burner design and operation recommended on the basis of the past year's study would not have to be extensive or costly, he stressed.

Major recommendations to date include repairing the burner to eliminate air leaks, revising the method of over-fire air inlet, keeping grates clean, and keeping the door closed at all times when the burner is being operated. Copies of the first year report will be published in September by the engineering experiment station.

Thundershowers Sweep Kansas

By United Press International A band of thundershowers accompanied by strong winds swept Western Kansas Wednesday night with one-half inch of rain reported at Goodland and winds gusting at 65 miles per hour at Garden City.

Elsewhere, the weather was quiet with only sprinkles of rain reported from the lower Great Lakes to the Central Plains and in Florida and the Northwest.

The rains were generally light although Akron, Ohio, reported nearly one-half inch.

The showers extended from the Plains Region into the desert Southwest but rainfall amounts were described as negligible by the Chicago Weather Bureau.

Temperatures were reported little changed in the past 24 hours. Blythe, Calif., reported a ready of 95 early on Wednesday night and Frazer, Colo., reported a cool 35.

Marijuana Garden Results in Arrest

Van Nuys, Calif. — Charles Edward Blalack, 24, and his 19-year-old wife, Evelyn, were arrested Wednesday on charges of growing a garden of marijuana.

Police said the couple admitted growing the herb, drying it and making cigarettes because they "like to smoke to relax."

"Well, we don't drink. So we smoke Marijuana to relax," arresting officers quoted Mrs. Blalack as saying.

Police said Blalack's garden contained 18 stalks five-foot tall and 45 smaller plants.

Mrs. Blalack went free on bail but her husband was jailed. Their 9-month-old daughter was placed in the custody of her grandmother.
