UN Report Gets New Test Debates

Washington.—(UPI)—A United Nations committee report on the hazards of radiation fallout has stimulated new debate on whether the United States should continue testing of atomic weapons.

Sources close to the situation indicated they would be surprised if this country called off testing without an international agreement to ban such tests, and an inspection system to guarantee enforcement.

One indication was an Atomic Energy Commission statement which said "a man must learn to live" with the radiation problem.

Russia announced after an extensive spring test series that it was halting its atomic tests, but implied it might resume them if the United States failed to follow suit.

President Eisenhower later hinted the United States may announce a similar test halt if scientists learn enough from the current Pacific test series.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.), chairman of the Senate Disarmament Subcommittee, told the Senate Monday that reports of increasing radioactivity from nuclear tests make it "imperative" that nations having nuclear weapons "immediately re-examine and reappraise our policies" on continued nuclear testing.

He said the UN report "shows there is still a great deal about the somatic and genetic effects of radiation that are hidden from us. We are like children playing with dynamite."

He said, however, any such agreement must include an effective inspection system.

Negro Seeks Post Of Committeeman

Texarkana, Ark.—(UPI)—The first Negro ever to run in an Arkansas Democratic primary sought the post of committeeman for Congressional District Four in today's election.

He is G. C. Mackey, who is opposed by two white candidates for the post.

Mackey was appointed to the committeeman post in 1956 by Gov. Orval E. Faubus and served through 1957 when the Arkansas Legislature made committeeman an elective position. If elected, Mackey would be a member of the State Democratic Central Committee and a delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

Morse Opposed To Territory Ranking For Washington

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Correspondent

Washington.—Having voted to convert the territory of Alaska into a new state, Congress is now debating whether to create a new territory out of the nation's capital.

For the citizens of Alaska have been powerless to run their own affairs, the citizens of Washington, D.C., have been doubly so. They can't vote for any officials.

So the Eisenhower administration has come up with a bill to make the District of Columbia a territory, complete with a presidentially appointed governor, a legislative assembly and a non-voting delegate in the House of Representatives.

But Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), who supported statehood for Alaska, is strongly opposed to territoryhood for Washington. He prefers that a commission be established by Congress to write a charter of self-government for the city.

Local citizens would then vote to accept or reject the charter. Morse is a top ranking member of the Senate committee which handles D.C. bills.

The political problem of handling government in the federal capital has always perplexed Congress and its residents. The Constitution stipulates that Congress was to "exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district . . . for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings."

Tight Rein

Ever since the District was carved out of the Maryland shore of the Potomac river, Congress has held pretty tight rein on running its affairs, even to regulating the size of rock fish that can be sold in local markets. Two days of each month are designated in the House for district bills only.

Alterations have been made from time to time in the local government, but in recent years it has been composed of three commissioners appointed by the president, one of whom was an engineer from the Army Corps of Engineers to look after public works improvements. The commissioners have jurisdiction over the police and fire departments, they make regulations governing life, health and property of residents, they supervise local public utilities. Schools are under a board whose members are appointed by the judges of the supreme court of the District. Judges are appointed by the president.

Since the federal government owns a large share of the real estate in the District, Congress each year appropriates a share of the District's budget—and the citizens are taxed to make up the balance. The U.S. share is now about 10 per cent.

No Representation

This means the nearly one million residents of Washington are taxed without any representation. They pay the federal income tax, the District income tax, a 2 per cent sales tax, and real property tax.

They can't vote for president and have no representation in Congress to elect.

Various plans for home rule have been promoted over the years. The Senate has passed home rule legislation three times, but each time the House balked. The chairman of the House District Committee is Rep. McMillan (D-S.C.), who is adamantly opposed to giving local residents self-government.

McMillan personifies the point of view of many southern oriented lawmakers who oppose home rule because of the city's large Negro population. It's good politics back home to oppose legislation that would give Negroes in the nation's capital a chance to help run things.

The ratio of Negro to white in the city is changing fairly rapidly as many whites move to outlying suburbs in Maryland and Virginia where extensive housing developments have been constructed. Negroes, generally barred from residing in these suburban communities, move into new areas of the city where only whites once lived. This changing condition is one of the strongest factors that apparently blocks home rule legislation, so chances of a new territory being created are very slight.

AF Grounds All Starfighters

Hamilton AFB, Calif.—(UPI)—The Air Force has ordered its fastest and newest fighter-interceptor, the F104 Starfighter, grounded for "modification."

The order came from Washington and applied to all Starfighters in the country.

The order came after Capt. Iven C. Kincheloe, 29, "who flew higher in space than any man alive," was killed recently near Yuma, Ariz., in the crash of an F104.

The Air Force had intended the Starfighter to fly a rocket-powered plane 60 miles into the atmosphere.

The Starfighter was grounded once before. That was shortly after Col. Raymond Evans, commanding officer of the 83rd Fighter Interceptor Squadron, was killed while attempting to land one at Hamilton AFB on March 3.

The Air Force said "excessive vibration" was to blame for the crash that killed Evans.

Maj. Robert Merritt of Hamilton AFB said "experience has indicated that certain modifications will improve the overall efficiency of the plane."

The F104 was introduced at Hamilton AFB last Feb. 20.

Crewmen Leave Long Document About Jail

Honolulu.—(UPI)—Five crewmen of the nuclear protest yacht Golden Rule left behind them a 15-page document listing the shortcomings of the Honolulu city jail.

Their complaints covered a wide range from uncomfortable beds to dissatisfaction with having grace said at mealtimes.

The pacifists — three of them Quakers — said they considered grace in jail a violation of the First Amendment since it constitutes compulsory religion.

Baby Swapper Said Married to Other Man

Tulsa, Okla.—(UPI)—A woman claiming to be the mother of Mrs. Richard Readdy, who swapped her baby for a pickup truck, has charged Mrs. Readdy really is married to another man, police said today.

A police detective told United Press International a woman who identified herself as Mrs. E. C. Neal, Center, Tex., Mrs. Readdy's mother, called to say Mrs. Readdy still is married to Jim Divine. The detective said Mrs. Neal wants to take custody of the Readdy's 4½-month-old son whom the Readdys swapped for a pickup truck on their job-hunting trip to California.

Readdy immediately denied the charge and said his wife never had been in Texas.

The Readdys were apprehended at Sapulpa, Okla., Saturday, six miles from the spot where they had given the infant to Jesse Burger, El Dorado, Mo., in exchange for his truck. The Readdys were being held here for legal action, charged with child desertion. Burger was charged with aiding and abetting a child desertion.

All have pleaded innocent to the charges.

Mrs. Readdy, believed to be expecting another baby, said she, her husband, and their baby ran out of money on their trip to California and started hitchhiking. She said Burger picked them up at Joplin, Mo., and they made the deal as they approached Tulsa.

Preliminary hearing for the three was set at Aug. 21.

Halfway Man Given 2½-Year Sentence

Portland.—(UPI)—Clair Ritter, 52-year-old former cashier of the bank in Halfway, Ore., who admitted embezzling $99,072 in bank funds, was sentenced to 2½ years in the state penitentiary Monday.

U.S. District Judge William East passed sentence.

The bank, only one in the tiny Eastern Oregon community shut its doors when the discrepancy was revealed. Ritter told authorities he had invested the money in property. His attorney, Anthony Yturri, told the court Ritter had turned the property over to the bank and that no loss would be felt by stockholders and depositors of the bank.

The money was embezzled over a period of 20 years.

Yturri also said that Ritter had not lost the respect of his friends in Halfway. Some of the residents there have offered to finance a $44,000 motel for Ritter when he gets out of prison, the attorney said.

Housewives Save Lives of Children

Covina, Calif.—(UPI)—Two housewives were credited today with saving the lives of two children by mouth-to-mouth breathing, life-saving trick one of them read about in the newspapers.

The two, Mrs. Betty D. Powers, 30, and Mrs. Ellen Angels, 22, worked quickly when the two children, 11-month-old Donnie Throness and his uncle, 1-year-old Raymond Moreno, were carried into Mrs. Powers' home from next door Monday.

Donnie's mother, Mrs. Barbara E. Thorness, had discovered the children face down in the bathtub where she had left them to gather her washing from the line.

One of the babies had turned the tap and filled the tub while Mrs. Thorness was outside.

Gathering one of the children in her arms, the frantic mother rushed next door for help. The other little victim was carried by a friend, Patricia McCracken, 19, living at the Thorness home.

Mrs. Thorness' quick-thinking neighbor brought Donnie around almost immediately and worked over Raymond for 30 minutes.

When county firemen arrived they found both children crying lustily.

Trial Date Set for Yachtsman Reynolds

Honolulu.—(UPI)—Yachtsman Earle Reynolds will stand trial on Aug. 25 on charges that he willfully sailed his yacht "Phoenix" into the Eniwetok nuclear danger zone with his wife and family.

Federal Judge J. Frank McLaughlin set the date Monday after denying Reynolds' request for an extension until Sept. 24 that would have permitted a mainland attorney to enter the case.
