Horse Show Set At Fair Grounds By 4-H Clubs

Trophies will be given in three divisions of the Jackson county 4-H horsemanship show scheduled for the fair grounds Sunday, Aug. 17, according to Mrs. Cathryn Gibson, president of the Jackson county 4-H leaders' association.

The show starts at 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

Approximately 70 entries will compete for the trophies to be awarded in the junior, intermediate and senior divisions. Classes will include horse judging, halter class, horsemanship and trail class.

For the halter class the horse must be led properly with a halter made to stand correctly while the grooming is checked. For the trail class the horse must go through the gate as the rider opens it without dismounting, back up between two posts and be loaded in a trailer. Horsemanship is to show how the rider handles the horse.

Public Welcome
The public is welcome and will be admitted free of charge, Mrs. Gibson said. A judge is expected from Oregon State college, she added.

The horse show is actually part of the 4-H and FFA fair planned for the county fairgrounds and open to the public starting Aug. 19. However, because of the lack of barn space the show has to be held before the fair, Mrs. Gibson explained.

Winner of the senior trophy last year was Kenneth Stewart, 16, of the Siskiyou 4-H club in Ashland. Linda Gibson, 12, of the Westside 4-H club in Medford was winner of the junior trophy. No intermediate trophy was presented last year.
