

Facts Show Shipbuilders Have Backlog of New Ships, Repairs

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press International
New York—(UPI)—One hears a lot about a falling off in shipbuilding but the facts prove otherwise.
The nation's shipyards have a big order backlog of new ships and a sizable amount of repair work.
Their business backlog isn't what it was right after the Suez Canal was closed. Then many orders were cancelled when the Suez reopened.
Marine Engineering magazine estimates the U.S. shipyards will do nearly $2 billion in business this year.
There are still tanker orders. Also there's a lot of replacement building for subsidized shipping lines. The St. Lawrence Seaway may bring a spurt of shipbuilding but just now the orders aren't forthcoming. Everyone wants to wait and see what happens when the seaway is opened in full force.
"The future is good for U.S. ship building," says Marine Engineering. "The ship owners have shown their good intentions of replacing their ships."
"The shipbuilder is showing his faith in the future by rebuilding and improving the shipyards."
"The government requires some 300 ships to be replaced within the next 15 years. Out of the 772 American flag ships totaling 7,300,000 dead weight tons, only 16 per cent were built since World War II."
"The average age of U.S. freighters is 12 years. The work horse of the tanker trade, the T-2, is rapidly nearing obsolescence. There is the potential business and the willingness to do business in the shipbuilding industry."
A Good Level
"It adds up to a healthy situation for the next 15 years. Then it should start repeating. It does not mean that there are boom possibilities—because there are not."
"Between commercial and naval work there is enough business to keep the U.S. shipyards working on a steady basis. Probably at a level lower than the shipbuilders would like to have but at a point well above the early 50's."
According to Standard and Poor's subsidized American Flag operations are a major potential source of orders. Almost all their ships will require replacement in the next decade, Standard says.
"This program, Standard notes, could generate $2.5 billion in orders for the nation's shipbuilders."

Grange News

Upper Applegate Grange
Upper Applegate Grange will be host at an old-fashioned ice cream social Saturday, Aug. 16, commencing at 8 p.m., according to an announcement made by Ways and Means Committee Chairman Ethel West at the regular Grange session Aug. 8.
Ice cream and home made cakes will be offered, and there will be card games and dancing for those who wish to participate. All are invited to come and bring their friends.
Other projects of Sister West's committee, which are still in the planning stage, include a barbecue, for which no date has been selected as yet, and a class for beginners in square dancing. This will consist of a series of 12 lessons for a stated fee per couple, given by members of the Rogue Valley Black Lighters dance troupe, and is scheduled to begin in September. The classes will be open to all who are interested, regardless of Grange affiliation. Further information may be secured from the Fred West.
In the absence of Brother George Redhead, who is convalescing from virus pneumonia, Overseer Pearl Byrne occupied the master's station and conducted the Grange meeting.
Chaplain Mildred Redhead reporting for the relief committee; stated that funeral services would be held in Medford the following day, Aug. 9, for Mrs. Mildred Green of Gold Hill, mother of Sister Anna Scott's husband, Willis Scott. She also reported that Brother Hugh Scovell had suffered another heart attack, and conveyed her husband's thanks and appreciation to the Grange for calls, cards, messages, and assistance with farm duties during his illness.
Final arrangements were also announced for Grange Church Sunday, which was observed Aug. 10, when Grange members attended the 11 a.m. worship service at Ruch Community church and then assembled at the Grange hall for a pot luck luncheon.
Home Economics Chairman Edna Sawyer reported that she and five volunteers from the Home Economics club would be at Camp White from 10 a.m. until noon on Monday, Aug. 11, to do mending for veterans in residence there. Since this is to be a continuing project, additional volunteers will be needed. She also requested that members having surplus fresh vegetables take them to the Ruch church for use of the youngsters who were leaving Aug. 11 for summer camp.
Sister Stella Offenbacher was named to represent the Grange on the Oregon Centennial committee for the Applegate valley, which Robert P. Sorber of Star ranger station is chairman.
Appreciation was expressed on behalf of the Grange for new song sheets provided by Musician Florence Lance, and also for copies of the Jackson County Soil Conservation yearbook furnished by Brother Harlan Cantrall for free

Towerman Fails To Stop Train

Sloatsburg, N.Y.—(UPI)—A towerman's admitted failure to flash a "stop" signal was blamed Monday for the head-on collision of two Erie Railroad passenger trains which killed five persons and injured 35.
Twenty-eight of the injured in Monday's crash 40 miles northwest of New York City were still hospitalized today, three in critical condition.
Signalman Frederick Roth, 38, a veteran railroader, admitted to investigators he had forgotten to hold a westbound train at Suffern, as he had been instructed, to permit an eastbound train to use the westbound track. At the time a freight train was using the eastbound track.
Moments after the westbound train bound from Hoboken, N.J., to Port Jervis, N.Y., left the Suffern station Roth realized his lapse of memory. Frantically he tried to reach the westbound train by radio-telephone. But his message never got through.

Ontario Attorney Gets Circuit Post

Salem—(UPI)—Ontario attorney Jeff D. Dorrah Jr. was appointed circuit judge for the 9th district of Malheur and Harney counties by Gov. Robert D. Holmes Monday.
Dorrah, a 37-year-old graduate of the University of Oregon law school, was named to the unexpired term of Judge M. A. Biggs, Vale, who died in office two weeks ago.
The new judge is a Marine flying ace and has been practicing in Ontario since 1948.
He will have to stand for election to the $13,000-a-year post at the general election this November and will resign as Democratic nominee for district attorney of Malheur county.

Radiation Expert Calls for Control Of Deadly Wastes

Burlington, Vt.—(UPI)—A British radiation expert called on all nations Monday to submit to international control over the deadly radioactive by-products of nuclear power plants.
Dr. Robert H. Mole of Harwell, England, predicted that sooner or later "serious attempts will be made to cheapen the cost" of atomic power at the expense of precautions against radiation injury.
Mole is participating in the first international congress of radiation research being held at the University of Vermont with nearly 1,000 of the world's foremost radiation experts in attendance.
Satisfactory Solution
So far nobody has come up with a satisfactory solution of what to do with the frighteningly hot potato of radioactive wastes from atomic plants. Not even the deepest ocean trenches seem to be safe dumping places for these wastes.
Scatter them carelessly and you scatter the seeds of cancer, leukemia and premature death. Industriously advanced countries like Britain, Canada and the United States can afford to lock up the more intensely radioactive wastes indefinitely in costly tanks.
The danger that someone will try to cut the cost of nuclear power by dumping the wastes without regard to consequences will become increasingly acute as demand for the new source of power grows, Mole believes. He said this probably would be especially true in under-developed nations.
"This danger," Mole said, "makes the world really a single place."
If one country is careless about waste disposal, all countries will suffer, he said. "I believe," he added, "that there should be international control of atomic wastes and some abdication of individual countries' independence."

Warns of Sailmen Marine Holds Law Officers at Bay

Hugh McKenzie, commander of Medford Post 15, American Legion, said Monday he has been informed that a magazine subscription crew is operating in town, representing themselves as being connected with the Legion.
McKenzie emphasized that the Legion has authorized no one to solicit magazine subscriptions in the name of the Legion.
Portland—(UPI)—A Gresham firm, Playcraft Products company, was fined $150 in Federal District Court here Monday on a charge of allowing juvenile employes to operate power equipment in 1956. The company makes children's furniture.

Red Skelton's Wife Released from Hospital

Las Vegas—(UPI)—Comedian Red Skelton's wife, Georgia, was released Tuesday from Southern Nevada Memorial hospital where she was hospitalized for a "mild nervous breakdown."
Mrs. Skelton returned to the Riviera hotel where Skelton is appearing. Hospital attendants said she planned to rest for a few days there.

PROPOSAL REJECTED
