Is That So?

By EUGENE BURNS

Baghdad — Via M.E.A. — Baghdad pigeon fanciers have considerable evidence to support their claim that the Baghdad pigeons are the best in the world.

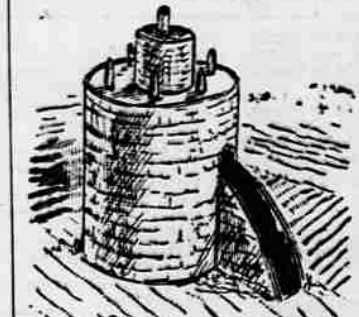

I learned this the other afternoon after watching some pigeons flock toward the rose-colored tower of a mosque as if they were answering a muezzin's call.

According to my informant's story, the Dutch were needed something extra special in the way of pigeons to help out in their military intelligence work in Indonesia. Finally, after a methodical investigation of various breeds, they selected Baghdad pigeons as the most suitable of the homing variety. It was a wise choice. The Baghdad pigeons responded so satisfactorily to training in carrying military messages that the armed forces of other powers began to buy them, also.

Widespread Use

Consequently, by the time radio displaced pigeons as message carriers, those of Baghdad were in such widespread use that their release to civil life easily accounts for whatever birds one may find elsewhere around the world with the same superior qualities as the Baghdad breed.

primarily responsible for spreading the fame of the Baghdad birds.

Back in the early 1800's the Dutch decided that they

I mentioned the vast quantities of pigeons we used to have in North America, citing the well authenticated case of a single flock of carrier pigeons seen in 1808 and numbering in excess of 2 billion birds.

Elvis Presley's Mother Suffers Fatal Heart Attack

Memphis, Tenn. — Mrs. Gladys Presley, 42, mother of singer Elvis Presley, died of an apparent heart attack today only a short while after reporting she felt "so much better."

Presley, on a seven-day emergency furlough granted when his mother's liver ailment grew more serious earlier this week, was reported almost overcome with grief.

Mrs. Presley's husband, Vernon, was at her bedside in a local hospital when she died. Elvis, who was asleep at his $100,000 suburban mansion "Graceland," arrived at the hospital shortly after his mother's doctor had pronounced her dead.

The singer, now an Army private stationed at Ft. Hood, Tex., was deeply attached to his mother. Friends said that much of his devotion probably was a result of his twin brother's death at birth.

The elder Presley said he was asleep on a cot in his wife's room when he was awakened about 3 a.m. by her "suffering for breath." He called her doctor, but she was dead by the time he arrived.

The body was taken to a local funeral home. Arrangements for services had not been announced.

The doctor said he looked in on Mrs. Presley about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday and found her apparently improved and "feeling so much better."

She was sleeping soundly after the physician left, her husband said.

In achieving fame and wealth as an entertainer, Elvis made good a promise made to his mother when the father was working as a Mississippi sharecropper and later when Elvis was driving a truck.

When he was inducted earlier this year, the singer's first stated reaction was: "I hate to leave my mother."

Baby Dies of Injuries Received in Accident

Springfield — Mrs. Sherrie Williams, Crestwell, 18-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams, died Wednesday in Sacred Heart hospital here from injuries suffered Tuesday night when a car driven by her mother crashed into a railing of the Camas-Swale bridge.

The mother, Roy G. and Jack Williams, 3, were reported in good condition at the hospital.

It was used to imprison the birds, which were very well fed, until the tower became too crowded to hold more. At that point, a number of the older birds were removed and slaughtered for food.

But the meat of the pigeons was only a by-product. The principal purpose of the tower was as a means of gathering pigeon guano which is found to be highly successful as a fertilizer for local crops.
