

Designation of Term 'Jew' Is Subject of Controversy

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Does the term "Jew" designate a person's religion, race or nationality?

This question currently is the subject of lively controversy among Jews, both in Israel and in the United States.

The dispute in Israel was touched off by the government's decision to issue new identification cards to all citizens. Each card shows, among other things, whether the bearer is Jewish or non-Jewish. The Ministry of Interior has instructed its clerks to let each citizen make the determination himself. In other words, any person who considers himself a Jew will be officially recorded as one.

Traditional Tests
The ruling has produced sharp protests from some orthodox rabbis. They charge that the government has abandoned the traditional tests prescribed in Talmudic scriptures. According to these rules, a person is a Jew only if (1) he has been dedicated to the faith of Judaism by the rite of circumcision; and (2) he has a Jewish mother.

Few Jews would argue with the first test, which is purely religious standard. But the second test signifies that Jewishness also is a matter of race. And this idea is repugnant to many people (non-Jews as well as Jews) who remember how Hitler used it as an excuse for exterminating six million people.

In the United States, the question has become involved in a larger controversy between Zionists and non-Zionists over the relationship of American Jews to the state of Israel.

Zionists regard Israel as the "Jewish Homeland" to which all Jews owe the same loyalty and affection that a Scot feels for Scotland or a Frenchman for France. This concept of "Jewish nationalism" has been heavily stressed in U.S. campaigns to raise funds for Israel.

Non-Zionists believe Jewish nationalism inevitably will revive the "Hitler myths" of a Jewish race, and will lead in time to a new wave of anti-Semitism.

Under the leadership of Lessing J. Rosenwald, former board chairman of Sears Roebuck and Co., a non-Zionist organization called the American Council for Judaism is trying industriously to persuade American Jews that their common bond is not national, nor racial, but strictly religious.

"Judaism is a religion of universal values, not a nationality," says the council. "What makes one a Jew is voluntary adherence to that religion."

One immense difficulty stands in the way of general acceptance of a purely religious definition. There are millions of people who regard themselves as Jews but do not accept the religious teachings of Judaism. These are the so-called "secular Jews" and they are numerous in Israel as well as in the United States.

The influence of "Secular Jews" on Israeli government policy is a matter of constant concern to some devout Jews who believe that the Jewish homeland should be completely dedicated to the religious precepts of Judaism.

Recent Splits

Ultra-orthodox Jews were horrified, for example, when a Jerusalem hotel owner recently was granted a permit to build a swimming pool to be used by both sexes. By ancient Jewish tradition, women are "unclean" creatures who are not allowed to bathe in the same facilities used by men. They also are disturbed by the fact that municipally-owned trolleys and buses operate on the Sabbath in some Israeli cities.

Other religious Jews feel that the extreme orthodox factions, by kicking up a fuss over swimming pools and trolleys, are hurting the cause of Judaism. They believe it is time to de-emphasize "non-essential" elements, such as the dietary laws and strict Sabbath observance, which are ignored by most modern Jews, and to concentrate on the "universal values" of faith, justice and ethical behavior that Judaism has contributed to civilization.

Then, they believe, the vast majority of Jews will be able to identify themselves, not with a nation or an ancestry, but with a religion.

Valley Adventists to Hear Plans for Rogue River Academy

Rogue Valley Seventh-day Adventists will be asked to consider their responsibilities for a well-balanced education for their youth during church services Saturday, as they are informed of final plans for the opening of Rogue River Academy, local denominational school, on September 2.

According to Professor Fred Wilbur, Academy principal, the business of educating its youth occupies well over one fourth of the denomination's attention. Of some 45,000 personnel employed by the denomination, approximately 12,000 are teachers either in elementary schools, academies or colleges operated by the church. Other interests are medical, evangelistic and welfare, and publishing.

Adventist schools, like that operated here provide much the same curriculum as public schools. Spiritual exercises also have a part in each day's program.

Professor Wilbur states that approximately 140 students from Ashland, Central Point, Eagle Point, and Medford are expected to enroll at the Academy, which is located on South Stage road, on August 28 and 29.

New teachers joining the staff this year will be Mrs. Jim Nations, who will teach the third and fourth grades, and William Rea, fifth and sixth grade teacher, both coming to Medford from Grants Pass. Prince Baker, from Eugene, will teach mathematics. Bible, health subjects and band in the upper grades.

In addition to those attending the school here, many seventh-day Adventist young people from the Valley enroll at Milo Academy, near Milo, Oregon, and at Laurelwood Academy, Gaston, Oregon.

Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock a group of students who attended Laurelwood Academy last year will present a patriotic program at the Medford church, corner of Edwards and Beatty. The program, entitled "This is My Country" will describe America in word and song, and has been prepared under the direction of Miss Shirley Burton. Miss Burton is a faculty member at Laurelwood in the English department, and has been spending the summer in Medford.

St. Mark's Sets Fall Ingathering This Sunday

The women of St. Mark's Episcopal church will have the fall ingathering of the United Thelma offering at the 9:30 a.m. church service Sunday.

The offering is made by women of the church in the United States to show thanks for the everyday blessings of life. The first offering of $2,189 was made by a small group of women in Boston in 1889.

Since that time the offering has grown to several million dollars, donated by women from throughout the country. The money has been used to build churches, schools and hospitals, to train workers in several fields and supply pensions for them, and to support interchurch projects around the world.

Pastor Returns to Pulpit At Butte Falls Bible Church; Youths at Camp

James Irwin, Philip Cramer, and Ira Rambo of the Butte Falls Community Bible church have been attending the Bible camp for high school and college students at Lake of the Woods. The camp is sponsored by the Community Churches of Southern Oregon and Northern California. The final meeting of the session was today.

Last week Rene Mallow and Susan Cramer attended Junior Girls camp at the lake, and Junior Boys camp will be next week.

The Rev. Howard Simmonds and his family have recently returned from a trip to Denver, Colo., where they went to be with a seriously ill brother of Mrs. Simmonds.

After their return, another brother, Dale McAllister, with his wife and mother visited several days with the Simmonds. The four McAllisters, Virginia, Dalene, Linda, and Debra, who spent the past year at the Simmonds' home in Butte Falls, returned to Denver with their parents.

During the pastor's absence, Mr. Albert Gandt of the First Baptist church in Medford filled the pulpit. Mrs. Gandt and daughters, Virginia and Caroline, provided several musical numbers and Mrs. Robert Edmondson substituted as pianist during the absence of the regular pianist, Mrs. Roger Harris.

"In Orbit" will be the sermon topic of Dr. George G. Roseberry of the First Methodist church Sunday. The following week he will deliver a lesson on "Waste, Want and Work" for the Labor Day sermon. Music for Sunday will include "Praise to the Lord, the Almighty," at 9:30 a.m. and "Praise Ye the Lord," at 11 a.m.
