Potpourri

Marilyn Van Derbur, Miss America for 1958, has been as busy this year as Queen Elizabeth of England. The friendly and personable young woman from Denver talked with Potpourri for half an hour Friday—while her luncheon grew cold on a tray in her hotel room, and the life she described certainly sounded a trifle hectic.

She traveled all over the United States and in Europe, appeared at numerous events where candidates for 1959 were chosen, attended water ski tournaments and rodeos, aided civic drives, presided at pageants and generally made herself useful and charming to promote the interests of her sponsors.

Miss Van Derbur, who was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Francis Van Derbur of Denver, is loyal to the Miss American program and says that the winners are selected on the basis of talent and other qualities rather than mere physical beauty. The young women who enter are mostly of college age and anxious to earn scholarships for career training and study, she said. The Pepsi-Cola company, which brought her to Medford, contributed $105,000 to the scholarship program this year, she said.

Miss America is a blonde, much to our surprise, and looked cool and fashionable in an apple green gown made with a harem skirt and worn with green satin pumps. She says the Van Derburs are a "close family and do everything together." Her three sisters and her parents went to Atlantic City when she was a contestant, and will go again for the 1958 pageant where her successor will be chosen. "I can't do without them," she said. "They're my gallery!"

Marilyn was a student at the University of Colorado, Boulder, when she was chosen Miss America, and will return this fall as a junior to continue her studies in music. She doesn't expect to have any trouble "settling down" to college, because she has always liked her studies and school. She hopes to marry and have a family.

Are you "just a housewife?" Well, listen to this. The Norwegian Social Affairs Ministry believes that "Housewives are the most important professional group in the country, producing more wealth than the farm and forestry industries combined." To show that they mean what they say, the Norwegian—and the Swedish—governments, have a service whereby they send housewives on two-week vacations at no cost to the women. What's even more astonishing—to a woman of the U.S., anyhow—they send in vacation time maids who run the house and even help with the chores, if it is a farm household, while mother is away. If the family can afford it, part of the maid's expenses are paid, otherwise the vacation is completely gratis.

The article stated that this summer it is expected that 3,000 Scandinavian women will take advantage of the plan. One thing is sure, if such a program went into effect in this nation, a lot more than 3,000 housewives would jump at the chance for two weeks away from the kitchen, washing machine and ironing board, to say nothing of pa and the kids.

The society editor remarked last week with some weariness, that there is practically never anything new in a wedding story. That was before we read the wedding of Nadine Rue and James Woods, held in Hornbrook. The story, written by the Tribune's reliable correspondent, Mrs. Katherine Chipman, said that the bride's cake was baked by Sergeant Sambo, who has baked cakes for brides in the Gosney family for several generations.

Sergeant Sambo (his name is Sergeant—it's not an Army designation) is 98 years old and he is a pure-blood Klamath Indian. It is said that he was given the name "Sergeant" because his father had once befriended an Army sergeant. The sergeant gave his Indian friend his army cape, later the Indian named his son Sergeant and now Sergeant Sambo can be seen wearing the cape if he needs a wrap.

Potpourri found some good advice for college freshmen in a recent article in the New York Times. While the panel was made up of women and the advice was primarily for freshmen girls, some of it seems just as sensible for young men.

A panel of young women from several colleges in the New York area had this advice to offer: Don't take on so many outside activities that your studies are neglected, but on the other hand, don't miss such opportunities as concerts, plays and lectures, which round out college learning; don't "run wild"—don't feel that you have to smoke and drink in order to be accepted, but stick to your own standards; don't be ashamed to admit that you have to study hard—it was said that some students are afraid to be found studying because they don't want the reputation of being an "egg head"; don't invite your high school boy friend in for a big week end unless you want the rest of the men on campus to think that you have a permanent alliance; don't ignore freshmen boys because "freshmen boys who walk everywhere turn out to be sophomore wheels who travel around in snappy cars."

One bit of advice was especially good for girls—if you don't want to loan your own clothes, don't borrow from other girls. One student said "either lay down the law to your roommate right from the start, or find one who is a different size."—O.S.

Festival Dancers, Singers To Present Program Today

Ashland — At 4:30 o'clock today the Oregon Shakespearean festival will present the fourth in its series of unusual concerts of early music, ballad, and dance. The concert is being staged by Marcia Thayer, festival choreographer and director of dance, with music under the direction of W. Bernard Windt, director of music for the festival.

Today's program will be colorful and varied, with dance developments from the middle ages through present times. Miss Thayer has tried to capture the flavor and mood of the various periods in the history of dance, she states.

The "Suite Pre-Classica," based on an early dance form, opens the program, followed by an early medieval carole, "Summer is Iucumen in." This is one of the earliest forms of dance, from England, where it was believed that angels constantly danced in circles in heaven, and was imitated in the period by its "Umdumpshier," as the choreographers of that era were called.

The concert will be highlighted by the appearance of the Ashland Kiltie Pipers with festival dancers joining them in several Scottish country and highland dances. A unique staging of ballet and contemporary dance will be performed to narrative poetry

Missions Topic Announced For Women's Group

Mrs. E. A. Faber will present a program titled "My Life in the March of Missions" to a meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service in First Methodist church Tuesday, August 26, at 1:15 p.m.

Since this is "Treasure Day," all women are to bring some treasure from the attic, basement or garage to be used at the white elephant booth at the fall bazaar. All items should be in usable condition. Odds and ends of crockery, vases and knick-knacks are suggested articles.

The business session of the Woman's society will begin at 11 a.m. with Mrs. Everett Faber presiding. The circle having most persons attending the all-day meeting will receive a prize.

Mrs. L. B. Pierce will lead the afternoon devotions. Circle 6, with Mrs. Gilbert F. Brood, chairman, will serve lunch at 12:15 p.m. A pre-school nursery is provided until adjournment of the afternoon session.

Vary coleslaw with fruit. Combine shredded cabbage with drained, canned fruit cocktail and enough mayonnaise to moisten. For extra flavor, add raisins.
