Santa Monica, Calif. — Actor Johnny Weismuller's 17-year-old son, John Jr., Friday faced a stay in a county forestry camp following a hearing on misdemeanor hit-run, drunk driving charges.

The youth was made a ward of the juvenile court and placed in the camp for several months Thursday in a closed-door hearing before Superior Judge Edward R. Brand.

Young Weismuller, a budding actor who just completed a role in MGM's "Andy Hardy Comes Home," was arrested a week ago in West Los Angeles after his car left the road and hit a utility pole.

Police said they found the teen-ager hiding in the backyard of a home near the accident. They quoted him as saying, "My girl friend has driven me to drink."

Power plants in New York State produced 40,900,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity in 1956.

Buried Treasure by Pinkney Gage

Value of Furniture Differs from Looks

Just because of a piece of furniture may look awkward, the cumbersome and otherwise in poor taste, one shouldn't assume that it is necessarily without value. It may have a very considerable value.

A case in point is that of a friend who recently exclaimed indignantly over the price tag on a chair displayed in an interior decorator's shop.

It was $200, and what irritated her was that the identical chair had been priced at only $30 a few weeks before. She remembered it well because it was such a monstrosity.

Her labeling it that was not unjustifiable. It was a square chair with the back along two sides at right angles to each other. Three of the legs were perfectly plain, but the fourth, which happened to be directly opposite the right angle forming the center of the back, was a very ornate job in marked contrast to the others.

Where it joined the seat of the chair it swelled outward by the prices dealers pay for stamps.

However, even on that basis the investment is still worthwhile, wholly aside from the monetary satisfactions the collector gets.

One man I know recently sold his collection of 12 sheets of Washington bicentennials for $325. He wanted the money in a hurry and didn't mind taking what some would call a loss. He very sensibly didn't regard it as a loss though.

His experience with other investments plainly showed his purchase of the stamps in 1932 for $57 was one of the soundest he had ever made. With all due allowance for depreciation of the dollar through inflation, he had still practically tripled his investment.

If he had done the same thing with the money he put into most of the stocks and bonds he bought in the early 1930's, he said, he would have been in a far better financial position today.

CONDITION DETERMINES BOOK'S WORTH

The fact that auction records may show a low price for a given book does not mean that a good copy will not bring a much higher price.

Prices paid at auction are sometimes meaningless as an indication of the real value of a work. They are most effective when there are several recorded sales of the same item, but even then their true significance depends on a knowledge of the condition of the items sold.

An illustration is to be found in the recent sale of one of the books by Stephen Crane, author of "The Red Badge Of Courage."

The book referred to is entitled "The Third Violet." It was published in New York, in 1897, only two years after Crane's famous Civil War story had appeared and while Crane was at the very height of his reputation.

Though "The Red Badge Of Courage" and "Maggie," a still earlier work of the author's, command prices two or three inches, forming what is known as a knee. The knee was carved in acanthus leaves. The foot of the leg was carved also, in the claw and ball design.

Otherwise, the entire piece was plain. The seat consisted of a piece of worn but still tough pig's hide held down by brass tacks.

I recognized the type at once as what is known as a corner chair, an article of furniture that was popular in the 1700's and well into the 1800's.

But that didn't explain the reason for the change in price, as far as my friend was concerned. Only the owner of the establishment could do that.

His explanation was simple. His associates, who had priced it originally, had not recognized the piece for what it was, probably a product of the late 1700's. He had been away on a business trip and fortunately had returned just in time to price it properly before someone bought it.

PURCHASE OF NEW STAMPS IS FIRM INVESTMENT

The purchase of sheets of new stamps as issued continue to be a sound investment, even though the quantity of a given stamp will run into the hundreds of millions and even billions.

An example is the series of 12 stamps put out in 1932 to commemorate the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birth. The stamps range in face value from 1/2 cent to 10 cents. Well over 4 billion of the 2-cent item were printed and the number run off of most of the others was well in excess of 100,000,000.

Nonetheless, the catalogue value of those stamps today is over eight times the face value. In other words, if one had bought a sheet of 100 of each denomination in the series, he would have invested a total of $57. But their catalogue value now stands about $460.

It is quite true, of course, that the catalogue value is determined by the prices stamps bring at retail, not around $300 and $600 respectively. "The Third Violet" has been selling at $4 and $5 in recent years on the first edition auction market.

However, anyone who finds a copy of this work should not be satisfied with anything like that price, provided the book is in good condition.

Serious collectors of Crane's works, and there are many of them, would be quite willing to pay much more for a sound copy of the first edition.

One collector I know bought a copy recently for $30 and felt himself lucky to get it at that price.

The book was in its original buckram binding of a creamy yellow color. None of the 204 pages was foxed or loose. In short, it was a thoroughly sound, clean copy, far superior to any of the others the collector had seen since he first started collecting Crane's works over six years ago.

Four Americans Missing in Boat

Hong Kong — (UP) — The Yacht Tora, with four Americans aboard, has been missing off the coast of Communist China for nearly seven weeks, it was reported Friday.

There was no way of verifying immediately the obvious speculation that the Americans have been kidnapped by the Reds.

A spokesman at the U. S. Consulate said nothing has been heard from the Tora since July 7, when it left Formosa on the way to this British China-coast colony.

The consulate was not even aware that the boat was in this part of the world until Mrs. Elizabeth Van Doeren, of Elkhart, Ind., wrote to ask for information about her son John.

John Van Doeren is one of the Americans missing aboard the Tora. The others are D. C. (Buzz) Bohning, of Belmont, Iowa; Allen T. Farmer, of Chattanooga, and D. L. Martin, of Seattle.
