

Honeymoon

in a Hut

Photos: Orlando from Three Lions

LIKE MANY YOUNG PEOPLE, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Taliafero of Corpus Christi, Tex., had dreamed of spending their honeymoon on a remote tropic isle. That's a rare possibility for most newlyweds, but thanks to the Hawaiian Village, Bob and his bride were able to have all the fun of the dream on a practical basis. The Hawaiian Village isn't really a village and it isn't remote. It's an up-to-date hotel on Waikiki Beach in Honolulu, but its thatched huts and Polynesian setting provide all the privacy that newlyweds could want while still affording all the conveniences of a swank resort. What more could honeymooners ask? Nothing, the Taliaferos blissfully agree.

Every groom shows off a little.

It's time for a coconut break.

Bride puts hubby in his place.