

ILLINOIS VALLEY Discuss Plans For Co-op

By RUTH RAUSCH
Cave Junction — A movement was made at the California-Oregon Chrome Producers meeting Saturday, Aug. 30, at Cave Junction to form a miners' co-op. The plan, designed along the same set-up as the grange co-ops, will extend from central California through Oregon.

The legal papers drawn up for the non-profit organization were prepared by Bruce Manley, Medford attorney, and president of the association, were filed this week. The purpose of this meeting was mainly to organize and get a co-op underway that would offer more strength at the next session of Congress in January. It is hoped that the force of an organized group will have a better chance to gain government help than individual miners. Fay Bristol of Grants Pass and Elwood Hussey of Cave Junction, who will attend the Western Miners conference in San Francisco, will give their reports at the next Chrome Producers association meeting the last Saturday in September.

Art Kellert, parade master for the annual Illinois Valley Labor Day Jubilee parade expressed his appreciation for the splendid cooperation he received from everyone in making this year's parade a success.

Kellert also stated that the necessary steps were being taken to make it possible for the Valley to have its own band in the future for such occasions. Heine's Kiddie Band from Medford supplied the march music.

The Illinois Valley Rural Fire Protection volunteer firemen were declared the champions of Josephine county as winners of the tug-o-war bat-

Huge Rotor Set In Powerhouse

Cougar, Wash.—UPI—The precision task of positioning a 287-ton generator rotor inside a circled stator with only fractions of an inch of clearance was completed yesterday at the Swift hydroelectric project powerhouse east of here. The 68,000-kilowatt capacity rotor measures 22 feet in diameter and stands on a 24-foot-long steel shaft which connects with the turbine that will turn the rotor inside the stator and generate electricity. Don R. McClung, executive vice president of Pacific Power & Light Company, reported the unit is capable of generating enough electricity to supply the needs of 80,000 homes in the Northwest.

Color is the fashion with a 'brighter' outlook for fall. Shown is a bulky knit tweed in harvest tone russet skirt and bloused chemette, while the blending jersey blouse is a clear pumpkin shade. An exciting color story.
