Anderson, 2131 Hillcrest road. Present members and any women interested in affiliating with the association or participating in the AAUW study group are invited to attend. The tea will be informal, affording an opportunity to learn more about the study groups.

According to Mrs. LeRoy Smith, study group coordinator, studies will include art, music, international relations and book review. Non-members of AAUW are welcome to take part. The tea is being arranged by the hospitality chairman, Mrs. Earle Fichtner, with Mrs. Edwin W. Gebhard assisting her.

The programs for the monthly meetings for this year as announced by Mrs. Theodore Bars, program chairman, will be correlated to the theme, "Living in the Space Age." They will be held at 8 p.m. on the first Wednesday of the month unless otherwise announced.

Special activities sponsored by the organization are being planned. The first to begin will be the Radio Story Hour which will start the first of October. This will be heard daily, Monday through Friday, on station KYJC at 4:15 p.m. with Mrs. R. M. Mayer heading the committee in charge of it.

Date and place will be announced later and she may be reached for other questions on the phone, NORMANDY 4-1841.

The local AAUW branch is developing plans to bring a children's play to Medford as in past years. Mrs. Berwick Wood is acting as chairman for this project and says the performance probably will be in November. Proceeds from this and the radio story hour are used to finance grants for graduate students.

By RICHARD D. WERNER

Father Norheim is in this country from Norway and is a representative of the Dominican Mission there. He was an established concert pianist before becoming a priest and continues his concertizing.

Chopin, Father Norheim displayed his truly fine capabilities as a pianist. He responded to the hearty applause with several encores by his countryman, Grieg.

We are happy to have been there and are sorry for those who stayed home. It was a most appropriate close to the Lord's Day.

Many Campers Demand Luxuries

The following is a condensation of a motorist appearing in The Sunday Oregonian, one of an annual series sponsored jointly by The Oregonian and the Oregon State Motorist. These articles describe vacation trips and destinations throughout the Northwest which are particularly recommended for out-of-state visitors coming to Oregon for the Centennial Year observance.

By KEN DAVID
Staff Writer, The Oregonian

Some campers are more domesticated than others. They enjoy pitching a tent or parking a trailer under a canopy of stately pine trees on the shore of a cool, clear mountain lake or stream and living out-of-doors for a time, cooking and eating under the open sky, fishing at will, lolling around camp fires, sleeping on cots or in sleeping bags.

But that's about as far as their notion of "roughing it" goes. They don't care a fig for packing or hiking through wilderness to a remote lake far removed in time, distance and desire from anything resembling the comforts of home.

The pioneer blood is too much diluted.

Conveniences Demanded

For this type, a dip in a lake is no substitute for a hot shower with soap. The female of this species particularly would also like to have a convenient place to wash up the dirty clothes, and something less offensive than a fly-infested backwoods latrine.

The hard-shell camper may shudder at the thought of such elegance as showers and clothes-washing facilities at a camping site. But statistics indicate he's in the minority.

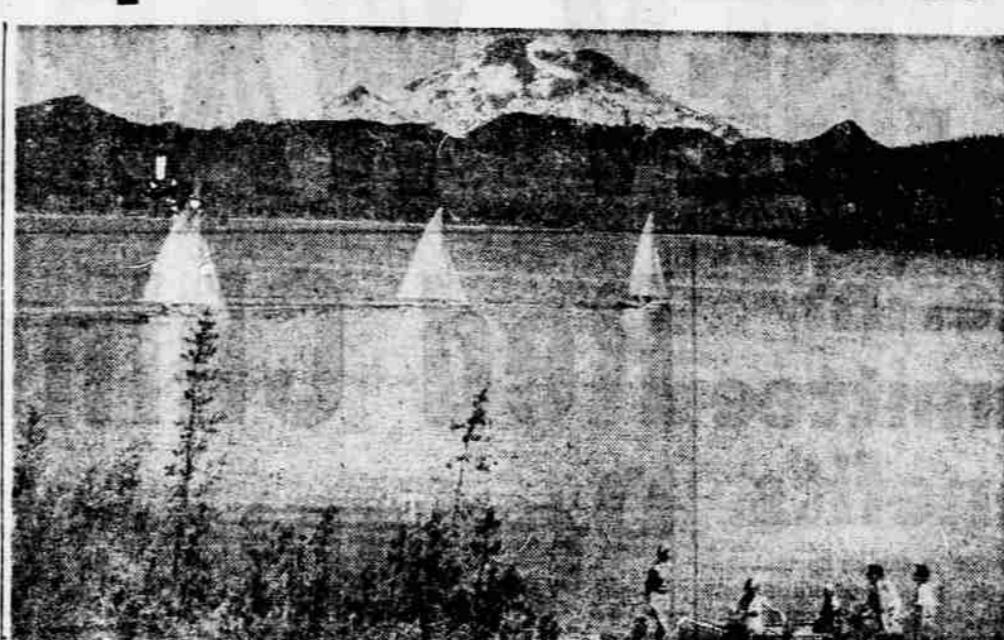

More and more vacationers are demanding at least this measure of homey convenience handy to their tent or trailer.

Myron Symons, proprietor of the lodge at Elk Lake, 35 miles west of Bend, recognizes that these "luxuries" harmonize with the average camper's idea of a desirable vacation spot. And he's prepared to do something about it.

We spent some time at beautiful Elk Lake on a recent motorist tour of the magnificent, fascinating country in the Bend area, a trip sponsored by The Oregonian and the Oregon State Motor Assn.

Power Supply Awaited

Symons said he has plans to construct a building for showers and clothes washing, with urban-style plumbing, at one of the camp sites around Elk Lake.

Three sailboats play "follow the leader" in this scene showing canoeists on the shore and the South Sister Peak of the Three Sisters. Elk Lake is 35 miles west of Bend on Century Drive, in the center of a huge recreational area stretching along Cascade range.

Symons said a survey will be made this fall for an REA power line to Elk Lake, and construction of the line is scheduled for early next year. When this power reaches the lake, Symons said, he intends to go ahead with his project.

But don't fret, you pioneer-blooded campers. There are and will be for a long, long time to come many spots in the region where you can escape the company of the sofies who desire this sort of thing.

Lakes Plentiful

This enchanting area in the midsection of the Cascades contains nearly 300 lakes and only 40 of them are accessible by car. And don't spurn Elk Lake. Around this beauty spot, nestling in the shadows of snow-mantled South Sister, Bachelor and Broken Top mountains, are 100 lakes in a 10-mile radius, a few within hiking distance and others which can be reached by pack train. Elk Lake is a good jumping-off point for an isolated-lake vacation. Horses are available there for packing in to these lakes, or for just fun-type riding.

This is a region already popular for the vacationer and destined to become more so. All the lakes and streams are well stocked with trout, hundreds of thousands planted by airplane, and the fishing ordinarily is excellent, particularly in the more remote lakes. The scenery is magnificent and the attractions diversified - ice caves, lava fields, extinct volcanoes, a mile-long tunnel literally burned through the earth by white-hot lava.

This belt of lakes extends all the way down to the famous Crater Lake and beyond to Upper Klamath Lake, the biggest in Oregon. Most of them, however, are concentrated above Crater Lake. Scores of camping areas have been set aside on these lakes. Some of the better-known, because of their size and accessibility, besides Elk Lake, are Lava Lake, Cultus Lake, Crane Prairie Reservoir, Wickup Reservoir, Davis Lake, Odell Lake, Crescent Lake and Diamond Lake, the latter a little more than 20 miles north of Crater Lake.

Improvement Planned

Eastward some 50 miles from this chain of lakes are two other excellent fishing lakes sitting side-by-side in a pair of volcanic craters - Nauyas and East lakes.

Most of the roads through this lake region on the east side of the Cascades are unimproved, although generally in good shape.

American Kids Spinning 20 Million Plastic Hoops

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

New York - UPI - A simple and inexpensive new toy has thousands of the nation's children and many of its adults going around en-circled.

The toy is a plastic hoop, which one West Coast company introduced in mid-summer, taking the idea from bamboo hoop twirling which has swept Australia.

The hoop became a fad faster than you can say "Davy Crockett." Estimates from industry sources are that 25 competitors of the first manufacturer have spun into production, that some 20 million hoops already have been sold, and that before the toy is dead as the yo-yo, another 15 to 20 million will get around.

I first noticed the hoop among the small fry of my own apartment-house neighborhood and stood agape as children from tots to teens twirled the hoops around their bodies with a gyrating motion to challenge Elvis.

Joy Lee Wright To Be Graduated

Miss Joy Lee Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Wright, 1257 South Peach street, Medford, is scheduled to be graduated from the Deaconess hospital at Spokane September 18.

Miss Wright, a graduate of Medford High school, received all of her nurse's training at the hospital.

Mrs. Wright will leave Medford Saturday for Spokane, where she plans to attend the graduation exercises at Central Methodist church.

the same principle with which you can swing a bracelet around your finger; the body rotates in a small circle, the hoop makes a large one.

The experts can spin the hoop around their necks, waists, knees, and move it from one part of the body to the other. Some of the veterans of five or six hours' practice can keep several hoops in orbit.

"We have one man who can keep five going at the same time," said a spokesman for W. R. Grace company, one of several makers of linear polyethylene, a tough and rigid plastic from which the better hoops are made.

The children are getting so good at spinning that in one contest, a 10-year-old in New Jersey lasted through 3,000 twirls, some sort of record for endurance. And twirling contests are springing up in all parts of the nation.

Most hoops measure 35 or 36 inches in diameter, although smaller ones now are coming to market. They weigh from six to 11 ounces, depending on the type of plastic, and the cost is from 79 cents on up to $2.50. Some jingle as they whirl.

Credit for starting the toy idea goes to Arthur Melin and Richard Knerr, youthful partners in a San Gabriel, Calif., firm. Melin said they started demonstrating the hoops at beaches in California. Because the hoops float, they are popular for water games. Some youngsters use them as skipping ropes.

Spinning started with the children but has moved "to all ages, right up to 100," said a spokesman for the hoop-making firm owned by Art Linkletter, of radio and television.
