Want Family Tree Traced? Be Prepared for Skeletons

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

New York - UPD - If you're game enough to risk rattling a few family skeletons, someone like Velma Wilson is the person to see.

Miss Wilson, 44, is a genealogist who started her work of tracing other people's ancestors by first chasing down her own from the last 300-odd years.

"Most people don't mind finding a few not-so-illustrious ancestors," said the New Orleans-born Miss Wilson. "Every closet has a skeleton or two."

The tree which Miss Wilson built of her own family goes back to 1614 and the birth of an ancestor named

Thomas Hall also spelled Hael. Hall was one of the original settlers of Manhattan island. He had a 77 2/3-acre land grant from the Dutch, a grant now one of the richest parcels of real estate in the world—the Wall Street and Old Trinity church area.

Started By Father

Hall's one child, a daughter, married an Edwards, and so the branches began.

Miss Wilson said some descendants of the Hall-Edwards clan feel they may have some claim to the land "but I couldn't care less; my interest is strictly genealogical."

Actually, she said, her father, Mark Thomas Wilson, a railroad engineer now retired, started the research in 1924. She took over the project in 1949 and once the tree was finished, she found trouble "planting" it anywhere because of its size.

Her original work sheets, listing some 22,000 ancestors and 600 living descendants, measured 26 by 54 feet when pasted up. She since has had the original lithographed in a more workable size—six by eight feet.

Sources Are Varied

The genealogist started out as a dressmaker and designer, specializing in costumes for New Orleans' annual Mardi Gras. But once she began tracing her ancestors, she soon stowed her sewing machine and enrolled in genealogy courses at the Congressional Library school in Washington.

She said she couldn't even estimate how many hours, miles and dollars went into her own genealogy. But other customers are charged by the day, travel, mailing or any other expenses involved.

Her sources are the living heirs, plus records from family Bibles, churches, vital statistics bureaus, city or county health departments and libraries.

"One tip always leads to another," she said. "But families today don't keep good records. Very few record names and dates of births and marriages in the Bible. It's going to make work harder for future genealogists."

"Anyone can trace his own family tree if he wants. You don't need to be an expert. But you need time, money and, most of all, infinite patience."

Space Age Theme Marks Annual AAUW Fall Tea

"Living in the Space Age," the year's program theme for Medford branch, American Association of University Women, was given prominence at the annual membership tea held Saturday at the home of Mrs. Emerson T. Anderson, Hillcrest road. Traditional floral decorations gave way to interesting mobiles in non-objective shapes, even as the center piece for the tea table. One of these mobiles caught the eye on entering the living room and two more swung in the breeze on the patio.

All were the handwork of Mrs. Edwin Gebhard and Mrs. Everett Lasher. Another bit of abstract symbolism was a small sculptured clay piece representing two struggling figures.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Harry Poston during the first hour and by Mrs. Gordon Mackenzie the second.

Mrs. John Stong, president of Medford AAUW, introduced the guests to her fellow officers, Mrs. Roy Elmgren, Mrs. LeRoy Smith and Mrs. George Johns. Mrs. Jeffery Shute, also an officer, was unable to be present.

Four past presidents who poured were Mrs. Herbert Seitz, Mrs. A. J. Johansson, Mrs. Dorothy Dowson and Mrs. Frances Willett.

Piano music made a pleasing background throughout the afternoon. Mrs. DeVeré Taylor and Mrs. Earle Fichtner were pianists. Mrs. Fichtner also was general chairman for the tea.

Opportunity for learning about the study groups was provided and card tables on the patio made a convenient place for enrollment. This year's studies and leaders will include: Applied Arts, Mrs. Everett Lasher, third Thursday at 8 p.m.; International Relations, Mrs. Justin Smith, first and third Mondays at 8 p.m.; Book Review, Mrs. W. F. Roemer, second Wednesday at 1 p.m.; Interior Decoration, Mrs. Calvin Smith, second Thursday, dessert at 7:30 p.m.

A Great Decisions group and one on music appreciation are still to be arranged. Possibly an afternoon art study class also will be offered. Study groups are open to non-members.

New Milk Delivery Tried in Vermont

Burlington, Vt. - A new method of milk delivery that could eliminate the familiar quart bottle has been tested in Vermont.

Milk dispensers, containing 24 quarts, were tried out for five months in the kitchens of families using six or more quarts of milk daily. These refrigerated cabinets hold two three-gallon cans and produce milk through sterile rubber tubes at the touch of a lever.

Housewives reported they found the dispensers convenient. The extra room in refrigerators was welcome, and the milk kept longer. Only disadvantage: the cabinets did not fit easily into the kitchen layout and usually it was necessary to provide small stands on which to place them.
