EAGLE POINT School Officials Meet

By LAURA A. McFALL

Eagle Point-Teachers and administrators of the newly-organized Eagle Point school consolidation which includes Elk-Trail, Shady Cove and Eagle Point, met for in-service Tuesday, Sept. 9, in the Eagle Point grade school gymnasium.

In attendance were 58 teachers and administrators, plus one student observer and one student instructor. Dr. Alvin Fellers and Mrs. Betty Lou Dunlop, both from the language arts division of the Southern Oregon college were present and served as counselors for the occasion.

The session was almost historic since it marked a phenomenal growth into what is a truly administrative rural school district, one which includes a high school and three separate elementary schools. The consolidation of the three districts took place during the early summer and followed closely on the rise of Eagle Point into a first class district. The latter was itself a consolidation of ten original districts and the Elk-Trail school was a consolidation of the Elk Creek and the Trail Creek districts.

The growth of the Camp White industrial area within the district's boundaries provided a much needed broadening of the tax base. This was the first general meeting of the teachers from the enlarged district.

The day's activities were planned and conducted by the language arts department of the system, and the program stressed instruction in written communication. A general session was held in the morning. The group was greeted by Superintendent Glenn Hale, and following that, were addressed by Dr. Fellers. Departmental sessions were held in the afternoon.

Final arrangements for the meeting were made last Friday when a group of English instructors from the three elementary schools and the high school met at the Shady Cove school.

Young Safecrackers Seized by Police

Jersey City, N.J. - (UPI) - Two would-be safecrackers - aged 5 and 7 - were rounded up by police Sunday at a branch postoffice where they had tried to crack a government strongbox with the use of hammers and chisels.

The youngsters had smashed the dial of the strongbox and scattered hundreds of letters around the post office, police said. The two were found by Patrolmen Patrick Antonaccio and Anthony Jennings in the post office. The case was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Bid Date Awaited On New Sears Store

Potential sub-contractors on the Sears Roebuck store planned for the East Jackson st. shopping center are still awaiting a bid date.

Plans for the store arrived here from Buttress and McClellan, Inc., of Los Angeles, the contractor, nearly two months ago. Four sets were reportedly made available for inspection at the Cal-Ore Builders exchange, 40 South Fir st., and another set was filed with the building department at city hall.

One builder said recently that the plans were not specific enough to bid on. But others, it is reported, have a "pretty good idea of what would be required." At any rate, no one appears to be bidding as yet.

The Sears store is scheduled to be the first step in the center's development.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Edwin T.-I'm no "brain" like my brother.
Mr. L. T.-But he has the ability to go to college.

Edwin T.-My problem is being the younger brother of a "brain." I am 16. My brother Ronald is 18. He has already finished two years of college. I'll just be starting when I'm his age—if I go at all.

My parents want me to go into some profession, but I want to start working as soon as possible. I get along in my schoolwork, but the idea of six more years of study makes me sick. I'm also looking forward to getting around the world a bit by service in the Navy.

My parents get the wrong idea of what it's all about from Ron. The boy genius claims that in the world of tomorrow everyone will need a college education.

Don't get me wrong. I respect Ron, but I think being a born egg-head gives him a one-sided point of view. He doesn't understand the People—namely me.

Mr. L. T.-We have tried our best to prevent Ed from having a sense of inferiority because of his brother's abilities. One of Ed's teachers told us when he was in second grade that he is an able, intelligent boy, but could never measure up to Ron mentally.

We have always shown Ed that we are satisfied with him as he is. We showed we didn't expect him to reproduce Ron's record at school. Yet he has always had some sense of shame about his record.

We know that Ed could get through college as an average student without difficulty. Young fellows with much less ability than he has gone into, the professions these days. There is no reason why Ed shouldn't do it too. He has the foolish idea that if he can't measure up to Ron there is no sense in his being a college man.

The Council-In the old large families where numbers of different abilities and qualities of workmanship were randomly distributed among the offspring, it was probably easier for the children to accept this variety as the spice of life.

In a small family, however, two boys as close in age as

Ron and Ed are likely to have a fairly strong effect upon one another—especially when one has outstanding abilities. Since the brothers have thus far been confined to a life in which school and grades are the core, Ed has simply had to accept the fact that he is a less potent individual than his brother.

We don't blame Ed for trying to struggle out of this situation. He seems to be trying to find a personality and a way of life in which he will be different from his brother—and effective in his own way.

The L.T.'s shouldn't oppose their boy in any of his reasonable plans for the future. They should merely try to get him to keep his mind open to the fact that he is still very young to make drastic decisions. He may very well decide that he wants that college education after his Navy service or after some work experience. He should plan his high school program accordingly.

Ed needs encouragement to become his own man.

VILLAGE OF LIGHT

It once was called Village of the Blind. But the Israelis who live there, all of them blind, voted to change the name to Village of Light. They changed it because now there is light—the light of hope. The citizens all have their own houses and support themselves by making and selling furniture, handicrafts, rugs. They were trained through rehabilitation programs operated by one of America's religious faiths. It isn't only the blind who need rehabilitation help overseas. Many have been maimed during war years. They've been deprived of training and education. They need the help you can give when you support the religious OVERSEAS AID Program of your faith.
