

Low Burdette Success Should Give Stengel Sinking Feeling

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press International
Some time today, Casey Stengel is going to sit down, turn to the sports section and get a sinking feeling when his eyes light on that painful but familiar phrase — "Burdette wins again."

Stengel, an avid reader, will quickly gloss over the fact that Tuesday night's 4-1 victory over San Francisco was Low Burdette's 18th of the season and that the triumph reduced the Milwaukee Braves' pennant-clinching "magic number" to three. What will really intrigue the Yankee manager is that Burdette did not walk a single man, never was in any real trouble and would have wound up with a shutout had it not been for Bill White's fifth-inning homer. Stengel will have some more food for thought when he

It's Results Or Else For Green Bay

EDITORS: This is the sixth of 12 dispatches on the 1958 prospects of National Football League teams.

By RAY W. DOHERTY
United Press International
Green Bay, Wis. — (UPI) — It's "results or else" for Ray McLean, the third Green Bay Packers coach in 10 years. Little "Scooter," one-time backfield star of the awesome Chicago Bears of the early 1940s, has to show his bosses in one year he can eventually do what his two immediate predecessors couldn't do in nine — make the Packers winners once again in the National Football League.

The once powerful Packers have finished in the NFL's first division only once in the past 14 years. McLean got only a one-year contract last January with the stipulation that it would be torn up if the Packers show improvement over the 3-9 record that left them last in the Western Division last year.

McLean concedes he has some good material, and that the team "shows more all-around strength" than a year ago. But he isn't making any predictions. Besides hiring McLean, the Packers stayed here to train to boost team morale and went shopping for talent among other NFL teams and in college ranks. They came up with the likes of tackle J. D. Kimmel and end Len Ford, sure to strengthen the defense, slotback Steve Meilinger for offensive punch and rookie linebacker Dan Currie, the former Michigan State star. Difficult Job McLean said his most difficult job was cutting his squad. This is not to say the Packers are "loaded," but it does indicate that McLean had more talent available than had been seen in training camp in recent years. He kept many of the veterans of past seasons. His quarterbacks will be the same two who worked — and not always adequately — last year — Bart Starr and Babe Parilli. Starr is usually consistent, but Parilli tends to have good and bad days. His biggest fault is not being able to spot his receivers — something McLean has tried to correct.

Several good receivers are available, headed by veterans Billy Howton and Gary Knafe, and newcomer Max McGee.

Making the Packers' running game more potent has been one of McLean's main concerns. He has altered the offense slightly and changed the blocking assignments to get his offensive line functioning more smoothly. A big help here could be tackle Forrest Grett, a service returne. The Backfield Behind that line, McLean has Paul Hornung, the former Notre Dame star who likes carrying the ball; veteran Howie Ferguson, whose knees are finally healthy, halfbacks Al Carmichael and Don McIlhenny.

McLean, himself only a mite of a halfback when he starred with the Bears, has given little Jim Shanley, a halfback from Oregon, a lot of work in the hope he would provide the Packers with a runner who could turn enemy flanks. On defense, the Packers seem adequate. Their line-backing could be the best in the league. One threesome which is fearsome is that of Bill Forester, Tom Bettis and Currie. In the secondary, is one-eyed Bobby Dillon, the captain and All-pro a year ago. Joe Francis of Oregon State's Rose Bowl eleven was being tested along with two or three others.

Cactus Jack Curtice Master With Needle

By SCOTT BAILLIE
United Press International
Stanford, Calif. — (UPI) — When Jack Curtice, Stanford's new football coach, walks the quarter deck during practice his Kentucky voice twangs through the air like an ole "gee-tar."

And Cactus Jack is a master at using the needle, the soft word or sharp bark depending upon how his charges are playing. His little speeches, all given with a cracker barrel flavor, mixed with lots of aerial tactics which break out of his "spread" TV has helped him post 33 wins, 10 losses and two ties in Skyline Conference during the eight years he was at Utah.

The Curtice Needle came out recently when a Stanford end shied away from a pass as the defender came up beside him with a loud roar. "Now what you, earth did you do that for?" Curtice demanded of the verbose one. "Here we sent one of our nicest, finest ends out for a pass and you get the poor boy so upset he can't catch it." The Curtice bark was heard on another occasion when a punter anxiously looked for his interference to form before he kicked the ball. Give 'Em the Business
"You've been doin' a good job and now all of a sudden you're watchin' the blockers!" Curtice cracked. "They do the blocking". That's their business. You kick the ball. That's your business!"

student body? "Jack is doing fine," one university spokesman said. "Several players have voluntarily come up to me and said that they like him." Curtice came to Stanford by way of West Texas State, Texas Western and the Utes. He was well set at Salt Lake as a popular coach and television personality. Why give it up?
"Because coaching at Stanford was a challenge I couldn't turn down," Curtice declares. New System
It's obvious that Taylor no longer is coach because the former Stanford guard ran his men through much more scrimmages, heavy contact drills and usually ended a day's practice with that "one lap around the field" command.

Curtice goes easy on the heavy stuff and stresses drills among smaller units so he can spot mistakes more easily. He kept scrimmaging to a minimum when he coached the West team to a 27-14 upset of the East in the last Shrine game. Just how this policy stands up on the Coast will be tested next Saturday when the Indians open against Washington State at Spokane. Other lid lifters include: College of Pacific at California, Idaho at Oregon, San Jose State at Washington and UCLA at Pittsburgh. Oregon State opens at Southern California Friday night.

Then the whole team will get it at once, such as when the defense melts before a touchdown drive. "Gentlemen!" Curtice shouts, showing the red baseball cap back on his head. "Defense is one of the most important aspects in football." How will he pan out as the successor to Coach Chuck Taylor, who now is assistant athletic director and was a favorite with the squad and

Don Jordan, Ortega Vie In Portland

Portland, Ore. — (UPI) — Gaspar Ortega and Don Jordan, a pair of welterweights with their eyes on different titles, clash here tonight in a nationally televised 10-round bout from the Portland armory. Ortega is a slight favorite.

Ortega, 23, will be seeking his 21st knockout in 62 fights and hopes for a title fight with welterweight king Virgil Akins. Ortega's over-all record is 48 wins, two draws and 11 defeats.

Jordan, who has yet to be knocked out, hopes his boxing style will be enough to overcome Ortega's power. Expected to weigh in about five pounds lighter than his opponent, Jordan says his ambition lies in the lightweight ranks.

Moyer Fight
Three 10-round bouts and a four rounder will follow the main event. Phil Moyer, who appeared in Portland last when he was defeated by Germany's Peter Mueller, will meet Henry Davis, of Phoenix in one of the ten-round scraps.

Phil's younger brother, Julian Valdez, goes against Julian Denny, of Vallejo, Calif., in the second 10-round match. Roger Rouse, Opportunity, Mont. will meet Bennie Doyle of Los Angeles in the other post-TV bout.

Crawford Spills Ashley Cooper In Southwest

Black Tornado Tuning Up For Scuffle With Scots

Defense against a single wing attack is getting attention this week as the Medford High football squad tunes for its Friday night conflict with the David Douglas Scots.

The game will be on the field of David Douglas which is on 130th ave. between Stark and Division sts., two miles east of the Portland city limits.

The Black Tornado aggregation faced a single heavy workout today and a lighter drill on Thursday. It will leave Friday morning for the contest. Head Coach Fred Speigelberg reported that 36 players would make the trip. Preparations for the Scot haste were begun Monday morning. The squad gathered for a chalk talk and to see pictures of last Friday's game with North Salem and last year's tussle with David Douglas. A regular workout was held in the afternoon. Special drill was conducted yesterday morning with a full squad practice in the afternoon.

Scots Have Large School
The Tornado came out of the North Salem brush without any serious injury. However, the flu bug caught up with quarterback Bob Pond and end Jerry Winetrot. End Pete Rasmussen appears to be recuperating well from the knee re-injury he suffered in pre-season practice and should see more duty against the Scots than he had against the Vikings.

Starting its fifth year of operation, David Douglas is not too well known yet athletically throughout the state. But the school is larger than Medford High. Enrollment is up around 1,800, including the freshman class. This is only the third year of varsity contention for the Scots who vie in the tough Metropolitan league.

The school came about from consolidation of three grade school districts, Russellville, Powellhurst and Gilbert. It is named for the famed Scottish botanist who classified plant life of the Northwest. David Douglas reportedly has around a dozen lettermen from 1957, with about one letterman at each position. However, four have been out because of injuries and the Scots are a bit shy on depth. Some of the injured may be back in harness for the Medford ruckus.

Big gun of the offense is left halfback Jerry Fellows, 175-pound, 6-foot 3-year letterman. Fullback Orval Horsey also showed up as a threat last week end when David Douglas whipped Reynolds 19 to 0.
