

Lipton Brought Cordial Note, Sportsmanship Back Into America's Cup Races

By JACK V. FOX
Newport, R.I. — (UPI) — The earl of Dunraven withdrew his Valkyrie II in fury from the America's Cup races, charging that cheating Yankees slipped out in the night and changed the ballast weight of his opponent, the Defender.

That was Sept. 12, 1895. It marked the high point of animosity and bitterness stirred between American and British amateur sailors over a $500 trophy cup England has been trying to get back for 107 years.

It took the Irish-born and Scotland-raised Sir Thomas Lipton to bring cordiality and sportsmanship back in the struggle for the America's Cup—symbol of world yacht sailing supremacy.

But such is the fierceness of competition that no one can insure there will not be some angry hassle when the British sloop Sceptre and the American 12-meter Columbia square off Saturday in the first of a best-four-of-seven races before 50,000 racing enthusiasts on shore and off Newport Harbor.

Was Good Loser
Lipton gained great affection because he lost every match and did so gracefully. He entered the Shamrocks I, II, III, IV and V, in 18 separate races from 1899 to 1930 and won only two—and no matches.

The hearty old gentleman always disavowed any publicity motives but if ever a brew was made famous it was the one sold by "Sir Tea."

Lipton never married but he always had an eye for a good-looking woman and it was his delight to take ladies aboard the Shamrocks to show them the "kitchen." Yachting men observed these were virtually the only occasions Lipton was seen aboard the sailboats, preferring the luxury of his steam yacht, Erin, where he hosted fabulous parties.

When Lipton got his last setback, the late Will Rogers suggested New Yorkers donate $1 apiece to buy him a cup. Within a week thousands of dollars were on the desk of Mayor Jimmy Walker and in 1930 a gold trophy was presented to Sir Thomas at a banquet.

"I will try again," Lipton said in accepting it. Rhubarbs Aplenty
But he never got the chance. Lipton died the next year at 81 and he had no children to send back a Shamrock VI. Dunraven's angry withdrawal in 1895 was the result of what he thought were displays of unsportsmanlike conduct. Dunraven claimed a tender had gone out to the Defender the night before the first race and added ballast to give the American boat more sailing surface.

In the second race, an excursion steamer moved into the paths of the two yachts at the start. The racers swept around the steamer on opposite ends but in the jockeying for new positions, Valkyrie II ran into Defender and disabled her. Dunraven's boat blithely went on its course and the New York Yacht club promptly disqualified Valkyrie.

The third day, Dunraven's boat crossed the starting lines, then hauled down her sails and quit the race summarily. The earl went back to England where he fired off angry blasts. The New York Yacht club then expelled his lordship from honorary membership.

Canada Tried
Canada is the only other nation that has challenged for the cup—twice and both times unsuccessfully.

One of the more amusing incidents came in 1881 when Capt. Alexander Cuthbert challenged with the Atlanta. Cuthbert didn't get his boat afloat in Lake Ontario until September and he hadn't the time to bring her out into the Atlantic and down to New York.

Instead he sailed to Oswego, N. Y., and put the Atlanta in the Erie canal where she was towed by mules to Albany and refloated in the Hudson river. The New York yachtsmen were horrified at the undignified spectacle and were pleased to see Cuthbert soundly defeated.

British Navy Lieut. William Henn brought over his Galatea on the next match. Mrs. Henn came along with the saloon done up in womanly fashion and accompanied by several dogs and a monkey. The strategy was of no avail.

An Inglorious End
The fate of the original America was an inglorious one.

After winning the cup in 1851, beating 17 British yachts, the America was sold and subsequently became part of the Confederate navy, run-

2 Tourneys At RV Club

Two golf competitions are set for this week end at Rogue Valley Country club. A United Medford Crusade sweepstakes is set for Saturday through the day and a Me and Mine three-ball six-some is planned for Sunday with tee off at noon.

The UMC sweepstakes will be 18 holes of medal play for low net and low gross honors. Entry fees will go to the charity fund.

The Me and Mine is for the husband and wife crown of RVCC. Championship will be decided on a net basis but gross prizes also are contemplated.

Bus Depot Here Agency for OSC Grid Tickets

Oregon State College, Corvallis—Greyhound Bus Depot in Medford, a local OSC football ticket agency, has a good supply of reserved seat tickets left for all five Beaver home football games, the OSC athletic ticket office has announced.

This is one of 17 agencies throughout Oregon and southwest Washington handling tickets. In many cases, the local agencies have better tickets remaining than the OSC ticket office, as the latter handles both counter and mail orders in heavy volume.

Games are:
Sept. 27 (8 p.m.) OSC vs. Kansas in Portland, Kansas, boasting a new coach in Jack Mitchell, formerly of Arkansas, is a much stronger team than last year and is expected to finish second in its conference.
Oct. 4 (1:30 p.m.) OSC vs. UCLA in Corvallis. These two teams are expected to finish 1-2 in the PCC this fall. OSC reunion classes of 1948 and 1949 will celebrate.

Oct. 25 (1:30 p.m.) OSC vs. Washington in Portland. Best seller in OSC home schedule.

Nov. 1 (1:30 p.m.) OSC vs. California in Corvallis. Homecoming for Pete Elliott, former OSC coaching assistant, now head coach of the Bears. California will remember tight 21-19 loss to Beavers last year.

Nov. 22 (1:30 p.m.) OSC vs. Oregon. The big game. Sales have been so tremendous that another grandstand of some 2,750 seats is being constructed in the south endzone. Reserved seats will be sold in this area as soon as the remaining 2,000 side line seats are gone.

ning the federal blockade under the name Memphis. She was cornered by Union boats above Jacksonville, Fla., and her crew sank her.

Later she was raised and put at the disposal of midshipmen at the U.S. Naval academy at Annapolis but then she was neglected again and finally was torn apart for junk.

Her beautiful gold-tinted spread eagle is now on display in the Nautical museum at Mystic, Conn.

UCLA Choice In Opening Grid Clash

New York — (UPI) — Missouri, Texas, UCLA and Penn State were established the favorites today by the oddsmakers to win four of the big intersectional games on Saturday's first college football week end involving major teams.

Missouri was made a slim 1-point pick over Vanderbilt for the nationally televised game-of-the-week to be played at Columbia, Mo.

In the other intersectional headlines, Texas was picked by 7 over Georgia for their night game at Austin, Tex.; UCLA was 7 over Pittsburgh at Los Angeles and Penn State was 13 over Nebraska at Lincoln, Neb.

Kansas State was favored by 6 over Wyoming at Manhattan, Kans.; Oklahoma State by 7 over Denver in a regionally televised game at Denver, Colo.; Texas Christian by 7 over Kansas at Lawrence, Kans.; and Rice by 6 over Louisiana State at Houston, Tex. night, in other intersectional games.

Here are the point-spreads on other major week end games:

South: Duke 1 over South Carolina; Georgia Tech 6 over Kentucky; Maryland 8 over Wake Forest; Florida 10 over Tulane; North Carolina 13 over North Carolina State; Florida State 14 over Furman; Clemson 21 over Virginia; West Virginia 21 over Richmond.

Midwest: Cincinnati 7 over Dayton; Xavier 14 over Kent State.

Southwest: Arkansas and Baylor, even; Texas A and M 7 over Texas Tech; Tulsa 7 over Hardin-Simmons.

Pacific Coast: California 8 over College of Pacific; Washington State 8 over Stanford; Oregon 13 over Idaho; Washington 15 over San Jose.

The three largest cities in Germany are Berlin, Hamburg and Munich.

Hunting & Fishing Southern Oregon

By MEL REES

The old Rogue never ceases to amaze me! Just about the time everyone has out the crying-rags about the runs being all over—there she goes—kicks up her heels and we have the best run in the river (for this time of the year) that has been seen for some time.

With the river very low and clear steelhead are being taken, that according to glowing reports "look like the ones you get down near the ocean."

The fish aren't too large but many of them skid into the 4-6 pound class which will make a nice bend in anybody's rod. Of course the best time to catch these "early runs" is after the sun gets off the water and this can be fairly early in the afternoon down in the canyon near Galice.

THREE BAITS

There are three baits which seem to do the trick. First and the most fun when the fish is on are flies. They hit royal coachman, March Brown and yellow body coachman with a sprinkling taken on mosquitos and other brands. In case you wind your own bait there is a good producer used by a veteran on the river and most every day he comes home closely followed by a steelhead taken on this killer.

Here is the recipe. Use some brown hackle fibers for the tail, brown floss body spiraled with gold tinsel. The hackle is brown and a white bucktail completes the job. Our lucky neighbor likes to tie his flies on double hooks in size 10 or 8. This time of the year it pays to use smaller flies than a little later. Small hooks have a tendency to come out so the double hook in the small size is a good bet.

WEIGHTED SPINNERS

A lot of these early fish have been taken on Nips, Motos or what do you call yours! These weighted spinners allow the angler to cast and sink a revolving spinner without the necessity of attaching a chunk of lead. These spinners worked over the reef rocks or at the tail end of the slack water just before it breaks over the riffle can produce some amazing results. Brass or nickel and you have a choice.

HOTSHOT FAVORED

A perennial favorite for the boaters is the Hotshot. This little lure that looks more like a pelican without wings than anything I know of has filled many a fish box with fish. Recently Bob Pritchard, a through to the coast river guide—fishing a party of tourists, took six fish on the "brake of dunn" with these little 500 hotshots.

The hotshot is an ideal boat lure for it floats and has a terrific action even when the water is fairly slack. What the fish think they are getting when they grab a snoot-ful of this little wiggler is anybody's guess—but it works and has been working ever since it was introduced some years ago.

EIGHT-DOLLAR PRODUCES

The pigeons came in! Eight-Dollar mountain has produced some excellent shoos during the past week and longer. Having heard that the boys were "into 'em" out there I took a short safari out that way Friday morning and although I got there about 30 minutes late had no trouble in limiting in an hour.

Eight-Dollar is peculiar in one way. The birds are not feeding there but use that side hill for a pass from where they are roosting to where breakfast is. Most of them are hungry and in a hurry so the shooting is tricky and interesting. One thing is sure no matter how high you climb or where you pick to shoot—there will always be birds flying farther up the mountain—and farther below you!

"With a good flight of birds in the area some of the other pigeon-spots should be getting good now. There is plenty of grain and berries in many sections of the two counties and it won't take the birds long to find them. I still maintain that you can get more pigeons if you use low base shells and fine shot!"

39,585 Total Attendance at Games at VAD

Camp White — Total estimated attendance at softball and baseball games at Memorial stadium, Camp White, during the past season was 39,585, according to Banks I. Paul, acting manager of the Veterans Administration domiciliary.

Rogue Valley Dairy Maids women's softball team was the biggest attraction in the mid-May through August season. The Maids drew an estimated 20,760 for 30 games. This total includes play four nights during the women's state tournament, which Rogue Valley ladies won, but does not take in their games in the Jackson County Softball association in which the Maids were the only feminine members.

The softball association had an attendance of 8,130 on 17 nights and the Camp White semi-pro baseball nine had an aggregate of 9,105 for 18 games. Thirteen pee wee and intermediate junior baseball games were contested in the stadium, drawing 1,590.

The Oregon women's tournament attendance was figured at 9,050 with domiciliary members numbering 3,425.

Domiciliary members accounted for 21,590 of the total estimate.

Ninety-five games were played with 71 of them at night. There were 30 double-headers with the softball association providing 17, the Dairy Maids eight and the junior baseballers five.

2,000TH WINNER

Mays Landing, N.J.—(UPI)—At the rate he is traveling, William John Hartack Jr., is a cinch to continue rewriting racing's record books. Willie, the nation's leading rider the past three years, reached another milestone Wednesday at the Atlantic City race track when he bootled home the 2,000th winner of his career.

TEAM CANCELED—Little Rock Central High School's Tigers get the word from their coach that football practice and games have been discontinued, with the closing of the school. The Tigers, one of the nation's top schoolboy teams, had been riding a winning streak of 34 straight games, and disappointment was keenly felt.

Weiss Will Probe Yank Celebration

New York — (UPI) — General manager George Weiss is expected to demand a full report today on the New York Yankees' off-the-field exploits which reached a climax in a victory-party tiff between pitcher Ryne Duren and coach Ralph Houk.

Manager Casey Stengel branded reports of a fracas between Duren and Houk as "a lotta bunk" but Weiss won't be satisfied until he has the complete story from private detectives who shadowed players on the club's last western trip.

agreed an incident had taken place. The only disagreement was over the seriousness of the affair.

The New York Post said it was "a bloody and bitter fight." Other writers presented a much watered-down version.

The Yankee writers agreed not to report the story but it "leaked" anyway. All said the victory party "was quiet as those things go."

NW Conference Crews Will Vie In Non-Loopers

United Press International
The fall season of football in the Northwest conference opens Saturday night with all six member teams engaged. All contests will be non-conference.

The Saturday night schedule includes: Lewis and Clark vs. Portland State; Linfield vs. Oregon College at Monmouth; Pacific vs. Chico State at Forest Grove; Willamette vs. Whitworth at Salem; Whitman vs. Eastern Oregon at La Grande; College of Idaho vs. Humboldt State at Arcata, Calif.

TROJANS PICK CAPTAINS

Los Angeles — (UPI) — The University of Southern California Trojans have selected center Ken Ankle and tackle Monte Clark as co-captains for the 1958 football season. The Trojans open against Oregon State Friday night in the Coliseum. The Beavers were due here today.
