

Famous Actress Explains Secret for Staying Young

By GAY PAULEY
New York (UPI)—Lynn Fontanne says her secret of youth is wrapped up in one rule: "Don't get bored."
"And funny thing," added the long-time actress who rates as one of the all-time greats of the theater, "in the last couple or three years, I confess I am occasionally bored."
"You may see me beginning to break up." And she laughed heartily.
I don't think so. Frankly, I hope I look as young and have as much vim when I reach her age, whatever it is.
"Questions about how old I am are questions I never answer," she said in one of the rare interviews she has given in recent years.
"I don't really remember how old I am," she insisted. "I'd have to count back. I haven't discussed age since I was 19."

This, she said, may be an "ostrich outlook" on the passage of time, but "it's more fun that way. And you'll have trouble looking me up."
"Now with Alfred it's different," said the British-born actress. "He comes from Milwaukee and it's easy to check." Alfred Lunt, her husband for 36 years and her acting partner for 34, was born in 1893, according to "Who's Who in America." Her listing gives no birthdate.
Born while Queen Victoria still reigned, Lynn Fontanne has acted since childhood. She came to America in 1916 as a protegee of the famous actress, Laurette Taylor. She and Lunt first teamed in "The Guardian" in 1924, and have rarely been separated since. This spring they opened in a new dramatic hit, "The Visit," and in a Broadway theater named for them. After a brief summer vacation at their farm home, 40 miles north of Milwaukee, they will re-open in the play August 20.

"We always talk about retiring from the theater when we're tired," said Miss Fontanne. "Right now, all I want to do is sit and stare. I love not to work. I like to play scrabble and do all the idle things. Cooking bores me, so I let Alfred cook. Why shouldn't I... he's a graduate of the Cordon Bleu cooking school. But I'm one whale of a seamstress."
"I'll tell you another theory I have about staying young," said the actress. "A woman's neck and jawline are very important... and unfortunately, also the first to go. All my adult life I've exercised the neck muscles by stretching my head back, and I massage with cold cream as I stretch."
"Not too much at first, three or four times," she cautioned. "Work up to seven or eight stretches."
"And make it a ritual, every night of your life."

Reception Honors Couple On Fiftieth Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Beelby, 635 Pennsylvania avenue, were honored at an open house Sunday, September 14, in observance of their golden wedding anniversary. The event was held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Miner T. Boshears, 408 South Grape street, and many friends and relatives called during the afternoon.
Yellow chrysanthemums and anthurium flowers from Hawaii decorated the rooms for the occasion and a gold cloth covered the table that held the wedding cake.
Mrs. Miner T. Boshears received the guests and Mrs. Kenneth Boshears cut and served the wedding cake. Miss Ruth Anne Marshall presided at the punch bowl.
Mrs. Muriel Friend, daughter of the couple, was in charge of the guest book.
The Beelbys were married September 16, 1908, in Toronto, Ontario, Canada and have lived in Medford since 1925. They have twin daughters, Mrs. Friend and Mrs. Boshears.
Mr. Beelby was a carpenter contractor by trade, but when first coming to Medford was manager of the first apple dryer in town and was employed by the Rogue River Fruit company for many years.
Also present at the open house were two grandsons, Kenneth and Dennis Boshears. Their other grandson, Lt. (jg) and Mrs. G. L. Boshears and small son who live in Honolulu, Hawaii, could not be present.
