

Jet Tanker Sets Seven Records

Spokane - (UPI) - A KC135 tanker plane smashed two Soviet jet transport speed records and set seven additional world's marks in a single flight this past week.

The tanker averaged 587.13 miles per hour while carrying a payload of 10,000 kilograms (22,046 pounds) on a 3,107-mile closed-circuit course between Fairchild Air Force Base here and Hoquiam, Wash., the Air Force announced Thursday night.

The plane topped two Russian TU104A transport records by flying 2,000 kilometers (1,242 miles) carrying a 2,000 kilogram (4,409 pound) payload at 557.567 mph, and by flying that distance with a 1,400 kilogram (2,204 pound) payload at the same speed.

The seven "firsts" which the flight established include a dash over 1,000 kilometers (621 miles) carrying a payload of 10,000 kilograms at 598.6 mph.

The KC135 took off from Fairchild Wednesday and landed a little more than five hours later. The distance of 5,000 kilometers (3,107 miles) marked the longest non-refueled closed-circuit distance for jet aircraft. The distance was more than double that which the Soviet TU104A flew when establishing a former record.

Air Force Turns Effort To Another Test of Atlas

Cape Canaveral, Fla. - (UPI) - The Air Force went back to work Friday determined to make the next attempt at a 6,325-mile Atlas intercontinental missile flight a success.

The first attempt at sending the 100-ton Atlas—the nation's first intercontinental ballistic missile—on an ocean-spanning flight Thursday ended in explosion after only 80 seconds of flight. But another effort appeared likely soon.

Success would have meant the United States had at last countered Russia's boast it alone has an ICBM that could devastate targets on another continent with a hydrogen warhead. The Soviets have said they shot a tactical missile more than 5,000 miles in August, 1957.

The Air Force, which rarely offers an explanation of a failure, made no exception to the rule after Thursday's flop. In a brief statement after the blowup, officials said only that the Atlas "exploded and destroyed itself" and that the "cause of the malfunction is not yet known."

600 Miles Above Earth

If the flight had been successful, the massive weapon would have climbed almost 600 miles above the earth, and moments later would have dropped its special nose cone into the South Atlantic at a predetermined area 6,325 miles from Cape Canaveral.

Unlike the first fully-powered Atlas that wobbled up and exploded after 70 seconds of flight July 19, the missile fired Thursday rose skyward in apparently perfect takeoff. But 80 seconds later, it blew up in a brilliant ball of orange flame and plunged in smoking fragments into the Atlantic.

McDonald Named To State Group

Jim McDonald, director of audio-visual department for the county school superintendent's office, has been appointed to the state information and promotion committee of the Oregon Audio-Visual association, according to Alf B. Mekvold, county school superintendent.

The appointment is for a one-year period, the superintendent stated. The purpose of the committee is to examine and promote the use of television, radio, motion pictures and related audio-visual media in education.

The Oregon Audio-Visual association is a department of the Oregon Education association.

REDS FLY ANTARCTIC

London - (UPI) - Moscow radio reported Friday "favorable spring weather" has enabled Soviet aircraft to resume "intense activities" over the Antarctic.

Snake River Area Closed To Anglers

Portland - (UPI) - State Game Director P. W. Schneider Thursday ordered closure of the Snake river to all angling from the downstream side of Pine Creek to the upstream side of the cofferdam in the Oxbow dam construction area.

Schneider said the closure was an emergency measure to protect large numbers of steelhead and fall chinook salmon which are now blocked from further upstream migration by the failure of fish passage facilities at the Oxbow dam.

The game director said the structural failure of the fish passage facilities has prevented these fish from going upstream to their spawning beds. The closure will remain in effect until rescinded by further order.

In Boise, Ida., the Idaho Fish and Game Commission also closed to all fishing the same area on the Snake for fear of over-harvesting of upstream migrating salmon and steelhead.

Construction workers Wednesday started lifting the dipnets from the cofferdam with dipnets until temporary fishtraps can be rushed to completion.
