

Sputnik I Rocket Made Great Impact on Life in America

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Correspondent
Washington - (UPI) - "Never has so small an object had such a great impact on American life."

This appraisal of Sputnik I was made a few days after the 22.8-inch Soviet satellite whistled into orbit on Oct. 4, 1957. At the time, it seemed entirely justified.

Americans, from the highest officials to the man in the street, were profoundly shocked that Russia had beaten us into space. There was a national outcry for stern measures, for more emphasis on science and education, and less preoccupation with chrome and comfort.

How much of this feeling has been translated into action? Aside from its shattering psychological effect, what changes has Sputnik actually produced in U.S. life during the past year?

Not many.

The record shows these concrete responses to the Sputnik challenge:

U.S. Satellites
The first American reaction was to get a satellite of our own into space as quickly as possible. Heavy pressure was brought on the Navy to speed up its Vanguard project, and the Army was given a go-ahead to see what it could do with its Jupiter-C rocket.

The first Vanguard try on Dec. 6 resulted in what Sen. Lyndon Johnson (D - Tex.) called "one of the best publicized and most humiliating failures in our history." But what restored morale was somewhat restored on Jan. 31, when the Army succeeded in placing Explorer I in orbit. Vanguard I joined Explorer I in space on March 17. Two more Explorers were subsequently sent aloft.

Encouraged by these successes, U.S. scientists laid plans to fire a rocket at the moon. The first try failed on Aug. 17, but further attempts are pending.

Defense Spending
A speed-up in development and procurement of new weapons, particularly missiles, has boosted defense spending from a pre-Sputnik rate of $8 billion dollars a year to nearly 40 billion dollars a year.

Space Agency
Congress enacted legislation creating a National Space Agency, under civilian control, to supervise non-military projects aimed at the exploration of space. The agency, which so far exists only on paper, has authority to spend up to $300,000,000 a year on space science, including development of manned space vehicles.

President Eisenhower brought the President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dr. James R. Killian Jr., to the White House to serve as his top scientific adviser.

At the President's urging, Congress passed a $900,000,000 federal aid to education bill heavily slanted toward strengthening scientific training. Highlights are repayable loans to bright but needy college students, matching grants to states for new laboratories and improved science teaching.

There also was nationwide agitation for tougher high school curriculums, with more stress on math and science, less on "life adjustment" courses. Schools began looking for ways to provide a greater academic challenge to bright students, and to steer more of them into advanced study.

A subtle change, but from the long-range perspective, was observable in the public attitude toward intellectual accomplishment. The scientist won a place of national respect, even admiration.

Diplomacy
The conquest of space brought urgent new demands for the big powers to get together on disarmament and control of new weapons. The United States proposed an international ban on space

Jayne Mansfield To Get Big Bed

Hollywood - (UPI) - Soon it will not be necessary for blonde Jayne Mansfield, wife of musician Mickey Hargitay, to sleep on the floor of their $75,000 home.

They're going to get a Texas-size bed, which according to Hargitay is twice the size of a king-size bed. Slowly but surely, he said, they are furnishing their Holmby Hills domicile with custom-built furniture.

The well-publicized couple discussed plans for their home Wednesday after Jayne had gone to the doctor for a check-up following a minor traffic accident involving a bus.

Hargitay, former "Mr. Universe," claimed the bus clipped his Cadillac Tuesday night on Sunset blvd., causing $25 damage.

The actress, who is expecting a baby soon, refused to comment on whether she was injured in the accident - on her attorney's advice - but friends said she apparently was only "shaken up."

missiles. Russia retorted that it would consider it if the United States would give up its overseas bases, a condition which the State Department termed "wholly unacceptable." And there the matter lies.

Valley Couple Appears On Television Program

Mr. and Mrs. Maynard W. Hadley Jr., 6779 Crater Lake highway, Medford, recently appeared on the television program, "The Big Payoff," on a trip in New York. The Hadleys won the trip east by competing in a Chevron salesmanship contest.

Hadley is operator of the Desert Service station, Crater Lake highway. On the program they won dresses, cosmetics, luggage and other prizes.
