

Yankees Square Series with 4-3 Nod on Splurge In Tenth Inning

Milwaukee — UPI — The Yankees, the betting choice for every previous game of the 1958 World Series, held that honor to the end.

The American league champions were "even-11" favorites for today's seventh and decisive meeting with the Braves. Yankee rooters must lay $11 to win $10 under this professional point "spread." Milwaukee backers must lay $10 to win $10 — even money.

These quotations were based on the assumption that Don Larsen would be New York's starting pitcher and Lew Burdette would open for the Braves.

Milwaukee — UPI — The World Series was stretched to seven games after all because of a big Yankee inning and the three-pitch relief pitching of bullet Bob Turley.

Turley came out of the bullpen for only one out Wednesday to save a 4-3 victory for New York over the Milwaukee Braves and even the series at three games each.

The Yankees had given relief ace Ryne Duren a 4-2 lead with two runs in their half of the 10th, but the fireballer from Cazenovia, Wis., had lost one of the runs and Braves went on first and third when Turley, who kept the Yankees alive with a 7-0 victory Monday, was summoned from the bullpen.

At that explosive moment there were two men out and two men on with the bouncing Braves, needing but one more run to tie it up, shooting to close it out.

Aaron at Third

Hank Aaron strained eagerly on third base and pinch-runner Felix Mantilla waited on first.

Turley, a comeback winner himself in that big fifth contest, strode in and took over. He hardly broke a sweat. "Bullet Bob" reared back and fired a strike across the heart of the plate. Torre fouled one off and on Turley's third delivery—Torre lofted a soft line drive which Gil McDougald took on a timed run to his right and the ball game was over.

Thus the Yankees were even with the defending world champion Braves after being down three games to one. Only one club in baseball's long history has ever come back from that deficit to win the title.

Most of the game's big moments occurred in the 10th. McDougald Homers

Hunting & Fishing Southern Oregon

By MEL REES

Many deer hunters are complaining about the tinder-dry woods for this opening of the 1958 deer season. Some nice bucks have been taken but most of them were taken soon after the season opened. Until we get a little rain the rest of the deer will be pretty much spooked.

FISHING SLOWS

Fishing during the past week has generally slowed on the river. The large run reported entering the mouth at Gold Beach seems to have "kegged" up along the way somewhere and hasn't reached the valley as yet. Last week when I was in Agnes I talked with a number of "through to the coast" guides and they reported that fish were scattered all along the river and didn't seem to be moving. This is probably due to the low and extremely clear water.

COULD STAND MOVE

Incidentally I took the trip down the river because of the many reports of the excellent fly fishing in the Illahe, Agnes area. As usual by the time I arrived the fishing had slackened off—in fact the natives said it was poor. I haven't had the opportunity to experience the "good" fishing down there but if taking 14 steelhead on fly during two evenings and one morning session is considered poor—then I could stand some of this!

These steelies are the smaller variety that precede the big fish. If the big fish hit as hard and fight as hard as their smaller cousins I don't know how an angler water—may be they don't! As is customary with steelhead, they do not seem to hit flies except when the sun is off the water so it limits the angling to about 2½ hours in the morning and the same time in the evening.

SLICK MOSS

Most of the fishing is putout slowed it away, also had started the winning rally. They were all tied at 2 to 2 when he stepped up and delivered a lead-off home run in the 10th off Warren Spahn, the 37-year-old southpaw who twice had beaten the Yankees and was shooting for the same route-going triple which Burdette posted last year.

Spahn retired the next two hitters and then the roof fell in.

Elston Howard singled. Yogi Berra singled to send Howard on to third—and that's when Haney decided Spahn was through. He called on his fast-balling relief ace, Don McMahon, to put out the fire.

It wasn't to be. Big Moose Skowron, in a slump at season's end, slashed out a single which scored Howard with what was to prove the winning run. McMahon then got Duren on strikes.

Duren, who fanned eight of the first 16 batters he faced, started to close it out in the 10th when he got Red Schoendienst on a ground ball.

But then on a 3 and 2 count to shortstop Johnny Logan, plate umpire Charles Berry of the American league called the next pitch ball four, with all the Yankees protesting.

Then it was Eddie Mathews

stepping in and Duren got him on strikes—the 11th time burly Eddie had gone down that way for a new series strikeout record which rubbed out the mark posted by Bill Abstein of the Pirates in 1909.

Fearing nothing now, Stengel ordered Duren to go into his full windup as he pitched to Hank Aaron. On the first pitch, Logan scooted uncontested down to second. Then Aaron lined a single to left and Logan raced on home.

Now the Yankee margin was only one run and that one out they needed began to loom larger and larger.

It became mountainous when Joe Adcock stepped to the plate. Stengel went to the mound to confer with Duren. "What are you planning to throw to this guy?" Stengel asked.

"Low stuff," Duren replied. "Okay," said Stengel, leaving him in.

But Adcock got hold of one of those low balls and drilled it to left field for a single which sent Aaron charging to third.

With right-handed hitting catcher Del Crandall coming up, Stengel called in Turley from the bullpen. Haney countered with Torre—but Turley countered with his knockout punch.

Milwaukee — UPI — I never worked so hard in my life and my only regret is that I couldn't finish.

Much as I would have liked to, though, I'll go with Casey Stengel's decision any time. I simply kept firing away until I got tired. When I started to lose it in the 10th inning, I and Casey knew it.

Striking out Wes Covington, Bill Bruton and Warren Spahn in the ninth must have taken more out of me than I thought.

Casey came out to the mound in the 10th for the first time after Hank Aaron had singled home Johnny Logan. I had thrown Aaron one of the best pitches and he really tomahawked it.

Anyway, Casey asked me how I intended to pitch to Joe Adcock. I told him I was going to try to keep the ball low on him. That's what I did and Adcock singled.

Adcock Hit Does It

Adcock's base hit finished me and brought on Bob Turley, who would hit it all up by getting pinchhitter Frank Torre.

Although I gave up only one hit until the 10th, it was a very rough day for me. The humidity along with the perspiration from my forehead clouded my eyes all the time I was pitching. You may have seen me wipe my glasses once or twice. That was the reason.

They asked me about some gesture I made to plate umpire Charles Berry when he called a fourth ball on Johnny Logan in the 10th. Frankly I don't remember doing it. But I do know that I told him I thought the pitch was a strike, not a ball.

Getting credit for today's (Wednesday's) victory is about the biggest thing that's ever happened to me.

When you're down in the minors, you dream about something like this. But you never figure it will happen.

You can bet I'll never forget this one.

Casey Stengel
Will Be Back

Milwaukee — UPI — Win or lose, Casey's coming back next year.

Casey Stengel's managerial contract with the Yankees expires this season, and there has been speculation, particularly since the club has made no announcement about next year, that the 68-year-old pilot might call it a career if he is beaten again by the Braves. He is completing his 10th year with the team.

"Nonsense!" Stengel snorted when the subject was broached. "There's a lot of work to be done with this club next spring, but I don't want to talk about contracts or anything."

Stengel's contract with the Yankees has been on a so-called "mutual agreement" basis for the past few years, meaning Casey can give the club notice of quitting as well as it can fire him. He's not about to quit, though, nor are the Yankees about to let him go — even if Milwaukee wins.

Sole With Calks

This wader is simply a rubber sole with logger's calks, toe straps and heel plate which attaches very quickly to any type of footwear. It is superior to logger's boots (which most waders agree is the best to date) because it is flexible and fits the contour of the surface under the foot.

I had the opportunity to wade the same water with a native in the lower river who was wearing boots. It was agreed that these flexible sole calks were far better. Besides selling for about one third the price they are much more versatile. It is my opinion that this is the finest article for wading that has been produced and I would highly recommend them to anyone who is tired of slipping and sliding around on slick streams.

DUCK PROSPECTS

The prospects for a bumper opening day for the duck season is good with many reports drifting in that the Klamath basin is "loaded" with birds. But, like many good reports some blue bird weather can put these birds higher than the proverbial kite after the first barrage. The best hunting should be found on the upper marshes where thousands of birds have been seen.

Ryne Duren Regrets Not Going Route

(Ryne Duren helped the Yankees even the World Series Wednesday when he struck out eight batters in 4 2-3 innings. Although he needed relief, he was credited with the Yankees' 4-3 win over the Braves in 10 innings. He tells of his impressions in the following dispatch.)
