

Library Has Recent Books Concerning Life of Pope Pius

As the world mourns the death of Eugenio Pacelli, Pope Pius XII, many persons will wish to know more about his life, his full career, and his teachings. The Jackson County Library calls attention to several recent books which tell his story in terms the general reader will appreciate and enjoy.

Pope Pius XII by Alden Hatch and Seamus Walsh, published by Hawthorn Books in 1956, is a truly popular biography and an intimate portrait of a great man. The authors did most of the research for their book from original Vatican sources and with the cooperation of many Holy See officials.

Diplomatic Maneuvers

During World War II, the Vatican became the center for a constant succession of diplomatic maneuvers. This phase of the story of Pius XII is related by Constantine, Prince of Bavaria in his book, "The Pope, a Portrait from Life." The author, of course, is a man born and bred to the world of diplomacy and has unique inside information at his disposal. In his portrait, Pius XII is shown as a great and noble Pontiff and also as a diplomat of wide cosmopolitan experience.

Another fine presentation of the subject is Nazareno Padellaro's "Portrait of Pius XII." In this informative story a fellow Roman covers the life of the late Holy Father from childhood days to 1955. The narrative includes the difficult war and post-war period, especially the struggle against world communism. Written for young readers, "Man Who Was Chosen," by Elise Lavelle, begins the story with Eugenio Pacelli's early home life, goes on to tell of his school days in Rome, of the great moments of his ordination and his elevations to higher offices, and finally of his dramatic election to the Papacy, and his importance as a world figure today.

Warmth, Stature

The author has been able to show in this biography the warmth and stature of the personality of Eugenio Pacelli, so often obscured by the very nature of his exalted office. Her account is factual in approach and careful to strike the right balance between vital statistics and human interest.

"The Pope Speaks," edited by Michael Chino, brings together the most important pronouncements of the Holy Father on the many urgent issues confronting contemporary man, in a carefully and lucidly organized structure. In this volume the Pope speaks from an incredible acquaintance with a wide range of problems, and with a spiritual and moral as well as cultural message. Any of the books mentioned may be borrowed through request from any of the agencies of the Jackson County library.

Huggins Subject of American Oil Ad

M. M. Huggins, distributor for Mobilgas in this area, is the subject of a nationally distributed advertisement sponsored by the American Petroleum Institute.

In this ad, Huggins relates how he obtained a knowledge of the southern Oregon area and acquired new friends through his activity with the local Oil Information committee.

Even before the Atlas and Titan Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles became operational, plans were underway for development of a new ICBM—the Minuteman—to replace them eventually.
