

RETURNING to Washington from New York, President Eisenhower angrily orders "full" FBI report of bombing of Atlanta, Ga., synagogue, apparently by anti-Semitic extremists.

Family Council

Edna L. — I can't stand Grandma.

Mrs. L. L. — She must show respect for the aged.

Edna L. — I am a 12-year-old girl and I'm so miserable at home I'm just about to run away.

It's all because of my grandmother. She came to live with us recently and I have to share my room with her. It's just awful. I have no privacy at all. When my friends come in, Grandma just deliberately walks in and starts fussing around the room.

But that's not the worst of it. Grandma bosses our whole house. She even bawls out Mother for talking too long on the telephone or for not wearing the right clothes or not fixing the house the way she would like it. She tells Dad he ought to get a different job and get Mother more nice things. I'm the only one with enough nerve to talk back to Grandma.

Mrs. L. L. — My Mother has always been the dominating type and I don't think anything can be done to change her at her age.

I have a brother who would be willing to have her visit with him for at least half the year, but she doesn't get along with his wife. Naturally, I am more willing to be patient with her.

We have tried to get Mother interested in getting her own apartment, but she is really too old to be so lonely. She has no friends of her own and depends on me completely to provide her with entertainment.

I am trying to get Edna to realize that she must have respect for the aged — that she too will be old and unwanted some day.

The Council: We're all for respect for the aged, but we do feel the aged also owe some respect to the young.

It is the moral duty of the young to be patient with physical and mental infirmities in the aged, to offer comfort and affection, but we don't feel it is necessary or right for them to accept the tyranny of the aged.

Of course Edna is all wrong to talk back to her grandmother, but it is not unreasonable for her to want some privacy or to take offense when her grandmother intrudes on areas that are not her province. It is asking quite a lot of a 12-year-old girl to force her to swallow all her resentment against injustice.

Yes, it is difficult to change the habits of the aged, but in all fairness to her family, Mrs. L. L. should make the effort. She must get her mother to understand that this household and family belong to her alone, and if the elderly woman wishes to be part of it she must accept a minor role.

We believe that if Mrs. L. L. stands up for her own rights and those of her family, Edna will be far more willing to exercise a little restraint when necessary. The aged shouldn't be permitted to make themselves "unwanted."

MARY HAS A DOG
Plattsburgh, N.Y.—UPI—The Little Lamb that Mary is supposed to leave at home now has company. Police chief Clem Young issued the following warning to youngsters: "The police department has been beleaguered with complaints about gangs of dogs hanging around schools and we are forced to issue a warning. Any more complaints of dogs will mean they must be picked up as nuisances, whether they are licensed or not."
