so confused he let her take off without the citation.

While Joanne has a way of shocking people into speechlessness, most of the victims consider her attitude "refreshing." And even those who don't are convinced that a "true artist" is entitled to be different and that Joanne is one of Hollywood's most talented newcomers. Her latest film, "Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys!" may give new evidence of Joanne's versatility.

As could be expected, there was much speculation about the effect that winning an Oscar might have on Joanne. As it turned out, there apparently was none.

She still detests being called "a star" and wants to be known only as "an actress." Nor has her manner of living changed.

She married actor Paul Newman last January in Las Vegas in the least surprising elopement of the year—they had known each other since both appeared in "Picnic" five years earlier and had waited only for Paul's divorce. The two could easily have afford-

When they eloped last January, it came as no surprise to Flickerville.
