White Students Start Registering At Little Rock

Little Rock, Ark. — (UP) — More than 400 white high school students started registering for classes today in private, segregated schools opened by the Little Rock Private School Corporation and Ouachita Baptist college.

The private school corporation's classes, for white seniors only, will start Tuesday in a three-story building that formerly housed the University of Arkansas Graduate School. It was Gov. Orval E. Faubus' answer to Supreme Court orders to integrate.

Other Classes

About 150 seniors were registered there. About 250 students were registered at Second Baptist Church for classes Ouachita Baptist College expects to begin there and at two other churches next Monday.

There probably are around 2,700 white high school students and 700 Negroes for whom public schools have not opened this year because of the integration dispute. Six or seven hundred students have transferred to schools out of Little Rock.

Officials of Philander Smith and Shorter (Negro) colleges scheduled meetings today to see what can be done about setting up private schools for Negroes.

Police Cars in Area

White students started arriving at the Private School Corporation's building as early as 7 a. m. Among them was Sammie Dean Parker, who almost had hysterics last year when Negroes entered Central High school.

Perhaps 20 men in sports shirts gathered on the sidewalks. There were men in business suits, perhaps FBI agents, among them. Police cars cruised steadily about the area.

The only Negroes seen were Negro students, who live near the new school and who walked back to Negro junior high and elementary schools.

Six Persons Injured In Auto Accidents

Six persons were injured during a series of accidents Saturday and Sunday, state police reported today.

Kenneth Calvin Griffith, of Alameda, Calif., was cited for failure to yield the right of way as a result of a two-car accident Saturday morning near the Rogue River junction, officers reported. Griffith's car struck the left rear fender of a car driven by George William Adams, 79, of route 1, box 55, Rogue River, as Adams was driving across the highway from Gail's market into Rogue River. Minor damage was reported.

Cars driven by John Hubbard Hoffbuh, 42, of route 3, box 178, Medford, and David Jack Shepherd, 17, of Little Butte Star route, box 225, Eagle Point, collided Saturday afternoon on the Brownsboro rd., one-tenth of a mile south of the Brownsboro store, state police said.

Minor damage resulted and no injuries were reported from the accident. The cars met on a sharp curve, officers said.

James Corbett Smith, 29, Butte Falls, was reported in fair condition in Sacred Heart hospital today while being treated for a fractured pelvis and multiple bruises. The attending physician said Smith was still undergoing X-ray examination this morning.

Smith was injured about 7:15 p. m., Saturday on Highway 99 near the Ever-Shady auto court. The hood of his car flew up obscuring his vision and forced him to drive into a roadside ditch.

In Fair Condition

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ray Quesenberry, both route 1, box 32, Rogue River, were reported in fair condition in Rogue Valley hospital this morning while being treated for injuries received in an auto accident near the Ideal Cement plant in Gold Hill Sunday morning.

Quesenberry is being treated for facial cuts and Mrs. Quesenberry for a broken right arm.

State police said the accident occurred when a pickup truck driven by Ivan Lee Smith, 58, of route 1, box 527, Gold Hill, turned into the entrance of the cement plant and in front of the car driven by Mrs. Quesenberry.

Robert Smith Morris, 24, of 210 Columbus st., Medford, suffered bumps and bruises, when the car he was driving Sunday on Highway 238 near Forrest creek hit a bank.

State Police officers said the Morris car apparently was west bound on Highway 238. After rounding a curve, Morris saw an eastbound car over the center line. He swerved to miss it and went into the north shoulder of the road, then swerved across the highway and hit the bank on the west side.

N. J. BANKER DIES

Outcome of Right-To-Work Vote Will Be Closely Watched on November 4

Editor's Note: Following is the first of three dispatches by Raymond Lahr, noted Press Institute political writer, concerning the election year controversy over state right-to-work laws. The dispatch describes the issues and tells how the battle lines have formed.

BY RAYMOND LAHR

UPI Correspondent

Washington—(UP)—Rival political candidates and their supporters are locked in struggle in 10 states over one of the sharpest issues of the 1958 campaign — so-called "right-to-work" laws.

The margin by which the voters accept or reject such proposals in the Nov. 4 balloting may go a long way in determining whether other states will seek to adopt such laws.

An adverse verdict would lend steam to repeal efforts in some states which already have them.

Under particularly sharp watch will be the outcome in Ohio and California, both large industrial states which have seen some of the sharpest political infighting on the issue.

Basically, right-to-work laws forbid union shop and similar labor-management agreements which require employees to belong to unions to hold their jobs.

They have picked up some allies, including the recently formed National Council for Industrial Peace, headed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, and former Democratic Sen. Herbert Lehman of New York.

On the other side are such groups as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and the National Right-to-Work Committee. The latter group included some members and former members of unions. These national groups have counterparts at the state level.

In addition to Ohio and California, voters in Idaho, Kansas, Colorado and Washington state also will decide Nov. 4 whether to adopt such statutes by constitutional amendment or through the initiative procedure.

In three other states—Maryland, New Mexico and Wyoming—the question of adopting such laws has become an issue in the election of state legislatures. In Indiana, the fight is whether the new legislature should repeal a right-to-work law passed last year.

Indiana is one of 18 states which have adopted such laws, 10 in the South, five in the Midwest and three in the Western Mountain states. Of these only Indiana rates as a major industrial state.

Voters in all 10 states in which the proposal is an issue have been bombarded with arguments pro and con.

In its recently-published "Union Security, the Case Against the Right-to-Work Laws," the AFL-CIO says the objective of such statutes is "to weaken, cripple and ultimately destroy trade unions."

Proponents describe the laws as a safeguard to individual freedom and as protection against "compulsory" union membership.

All of the 18 laws in effect protect the right to join as well as to refrain from joining unions. Both sides base their arguments in part on the experience in the states which have adopted the laws.

Thus the National Right to Work Committee publishes a table showing that union membership grew 192.1 per cent between 1939 and 1953 in the right-to-work states compared with 187.8 per cent in the other states.

Direct Rebuttal

In direct rebuttal, the AFL-CIO book quotes Professor Frederic Meyers of the University of Texas as saying in a study of the Texas laws: "It is virtually impossible to measure the precise effect of these laws on union organization, for no one can know what would have happened if another statutory environment had prevailed."

Meyers' study, published in October, 1955, also said Texas printing industries were not as highly unionized at that time as they were before the war. He added that union growth had been slow in the construction industry and in intrastate and local trucking at a time of rapid unionization in interstate trucking.

The right-to-work committee and the AFL-CIO present similar figures in different ways in an attempt to show what has happened economically to individuals in various states with right-to-work laws.

Atomic Energy Uses Talk Set

Peaceful uses of atomic energy—especially in biology and agriculture—is the subject of the United Nations week talk by Dr. Joseph S. Butts to be given here Tuesday night, according to Moore Hamilton, president of the Jackson County U.N. association.

Dr. Butts, formerly with the Atomic Energy commission and the Office of European Economic Cooperation, is now head of the agricultural chemistry department of Oregon State college. His lecture is sponsored by the Medford United Nations association. The public is invited to hear him at 8 p. m., Tuesday, Oct. 21, in the Jackson county courthouse, Hamilton said.

"Our aim is to reverse the present preoccupation of atomic energy for war purposes and to recapture the spirit which animated President Dwight D. Eisenhower's U.N. Atom for Peace program," Hamilton said. "Another purpose of this program is to focus attention on the peaceful aims of the United States."
