Alaska Good Place To Make Money if Willing To Work

Fairbanks, Alaska — (UPI) — "I've worked hard for these 11 years," he said, "and I'm just about ready to take it easy. I have a nice investment in the ranch. And maybe I'll work only in the summers from here on. I've found a nice place to build a cabin and a pal is going with me and we'll build it this winter."

An amateur philosopher, Frank doesn't worry too much about the rest of the world. He does buy Fairbanks and Seattle newspapers — but mostly because he wants to look at the sports pages. "When I get out in the country," he said, "I forget about everything. This is the last frontier—and it may be that I'm what you call 'going native.' But it's a wonderful life and I wouldn't trade it. I haven't been stateside in five years."

Smart, New Accent

In the winter, he tends bar. The Alaska union scale for bartenders is $30 a day. Most of them work six days a week. In addition, tips may run from $5 to $15 a day.

Presto doesn't spend much money on wine, women or song. If he gets a few days or a week off, he puts a pack on his back and heads for the great outdoors. Every year he kills his moose and a caribou and gives the meat to his many friends. He also hunts grouse, ducks and geese. And he does a lot of fishing. His favorite fish is the grayling. "If you ever eat a grayling," said Presto, "you'll throw trout back into the river."

Becomes Fire Fighter
In a dull period of the work season, he sometimes takes on a job as a fire fighter in the forests. For this he makes about $40 a day—and gets a good chance to commune with nature, besides.

Second Ross Island Bridge Plan Loses

Portland — (UPI) — The Portland Planning Commission has declined to approve a proposal for a second Ross Island bridge across the Willamette river here.

The Commission suggested that a better investment of tax money would be a contribution toward approaches for a proposed new Marquam bridge that would be part of a federal-state freeway system through the city.

The Commission declared "with this freeway available, additional capacity on the Ross Island bridge probably would not be needed until after 1975."
