HIGH MARKS

Oxford, Miss.—(UPI)—Dr. Katherine Rea, Dean of Women at the University of Mississippi, says a high scholastic average in college does not seem to help women graduates to higher salaries. Dr. Rea earned her Ph.D. degree by studying how women graduates of eight colleges in Mississippi fare in their jobs. She found that "graduates of distinction" are earning only slightly more than the woman in the low-average group.

SPANKING NEW 'GAVEL'

Jackson, Miss. —(UPI)—Judge W. T. Horton has a new kind of "gavel" he uses when presiding in youth court. Shaped like a paddle, it quickly commands the respect of juveniles. Horton said he also "prescribes" it to parents as "medicine" for their delinquent children.

Canada in 1663 had a white population of about 2,500 along the St. Lawrence near Quebec, Trois-Rivieres and Montreal.

The Medical Roundup

Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

On Avoiding Mental Troubles

When I write in this column on the great importance of heredity in producing mental troubles, some people promptly accuse me angrily of having said that because one has a number of insane forebears one must go insane. Actually, I never said such a thing and I never will, because it is not true. I know any number of fine sensible and hard-working people who have several psychotic relatives on one side of the family, and I even know some nice sensible people who have insanity on both sides of their family. My patients with this heredity have lived wisely, and they have kept away from alcohol and bad friends; they have gone to work every day, and they haven't dissipated. As many such a person has said to me. "It wasn't easy, but all my life I have been learning to keep my bad nerves under control, and I have hung onto my sanity."

Dr. Alvarez

Many a time when a young person with bad nervous inheritance has asked me what to do to stay sane, I have said, "Live sanely. Don't live foolishly as you are doing. Quit consorting with a number of poorly-chosen friends who seem to be proud of their eccentric and dissipated behavior. Go to bed at a decent time, and get up at seven as other persons do. Go to work and earn your living — don't keep sponging off your doting mother."

Sometimes when a person asks me how I know he isn't crazy I say, "Because you seem to be really in love with your wife. A good sign of sanity is the ability of a person to love someone besides himself."

I am reminded of this as I read a statement of Dr. Francis Braceland, one of America's most eminent psychiatrists, who heads the Institute for Living at Hartford, Conn. He recently said, "Nobody can stay psychotic long if he is able to form one good warm human relationship." Which reminds me of a statement once made by the wise old superintendent of a mental hospital. He said to me, "Whenever I see two of my patients getting chummy I know that I can soon discharge the two of them, cured."

As we all know, the crank and the "peculiar bird" and the recluse are all wrapped up in themselves. They are so self-centered they want nothing to do with anyone. One of my eccentric patients bought himself a lonely island in a big Minnesota lake. There he says he is happy because no one can come near to bother him.

And so, I keep saying to those of my mildly psychotic patients who say they want to stay sane, "Stay social; think for others; do kind and thoughtful things for others, and try to win and keep the love of some fine person of the opposite sex."

Nine-tenths of Battle

In my early days of practice, it took me several years to learn never to try to cure anyone against his will. Also, I learned that people would seldom mend their ways and reform simply because I had them held out rewards or advantages, or tried to scare them with threats of some disaster that lay ahead for them. No; those who tried to get well and did get well, and those who tried to quit bad habits, and did quit them, all had strong desire for improvement, down deep in them, that caused them to change. As Seneca wisely said so long ago, "It is part of the cure to wish to be cured."

Celiac Disease

A few anxious mothers want to know what can be done about a child with celiac disease. Usually the child is thin, failing to grow; he has loose bulky, pale, offensive-smelling stools; he is anemic; his abdomen is distended and his muscles are weak. Obviously, the first thing for the mother to do is to find a good pediatrician (children's disease specialist).

Often, the giving of starch seems to do these children the greatest amount of harm. Dr. Wilfrid Sheldon, of London, says that the gluten of wheat seems to be the greatest offender, and must be removed from the diet. Flour made from oats apparently is well tolerated.

At the present time, celiac disease is rarely fatal. However, normal growth and development must be kept up by proper adjustments of the child's diet and the needed supplements of vitamins.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

WEDDING CANCELED — Rev. G. W. Rollins is shown after his arrest at Sevierville, Tenn. Rollins ran off to Georgia with an 11-year-old girl he was going to marry, but was arrested on kidnaping charges brought by the girl's father.

Ithaca, N.Y.—(UPI)—The call of a bird is much more significant than most people think, according to Cornell University scientists. Ornithologists had long wondered why two groups of birds, seemingly similar, never interbred. After a series of tests with a complex machine called an audiospectrograph, the scientists found marked differences in the songs of the two birds. The ornithologists concluded that the birds stayed away from one another because they didn't "speak the same language."
