Alcorn, Butler Outline Issues To Face Electors at Polls Tomorrow

By MEADE ALCORN
Republican National Chairman
Written for UPI

Three clear-cut alternatives face the American voter as he goes to the polls tomorrow:—Should President Eisenhower, who brought peace to Korea and has maintained it with firm policies based on moral principles, be saddled with a radical-dominated Congress loud with Democrat voices of appeasement? Or should Congress be in the hands of Republicans who stand shoulder-to-shoulder with the President against appeasement and for firmness, the only policy which will maintain the peace?

—Should legislative power be entrusted to men of such little faith in America that they preach "depression" in an attempt to frighten and divide Americans? Or should the Congress be guided by Republicans who believe in and trust the capabilities of Americans and the economic system which has given us record-high living standards?

Should Congress be controlled by men who, through dependence for campaign contributions, blindly vote the line of labor bosses whose excesses have shocked the conscience of America? Or should the Congress be controlled by Republicans whose party has brought America's workers their greatest level of income and security? Only a GOP Congress will have enough fortitude to pass legislation to protect union members against bossism and racketeer raids.

Other Issues
There are many other issues, of course, including local matters which determine many races. But I feel that these three matters—maintenance of peace, responsible economic policy and labor bossism—will be factors in elections everywhere on Nov. 4.

In this limited space, I would like to elaborate on the vital issue of maintaining the peace since this reaches deepest into America.

This administration ended one war and has kept us out of others in these treacherous times.

When today's Democratic critics of our foreign policy were in office, we were hit by two wars within 10 years—that is where their policies would lead again if those policies of weakness, retreat and appeasement were followed.

If the Democrats win the Congress, those who follow the Acheson line on foreign policy, would subject the administration to two years of heckling, criticism and sabotage which would weaken the hand of the President in dealing with the Communists.

Foreign Policy Division
Democrats will use the Congress as a sounding board with which to fabricate issues for the 1960 election. In the realm of foreign policy alone, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee already has allocated hundreds of thousands of dollars for a so-called "investigation."

Can anyone doubt this would be used as an official forum by every Democrat politician intent on undercutting the President. While the President faces the Communists with his firm policy for peace, the Democrats would be yapping at his heels constantly.

Pasternak's Wife Says Writer To Take Long Rest

Moscow—(UPI)—Excitement over the furor caused by his receiving the Nobel prize for literature has forced Soviet author Boris Pasternak to take a rest, his wife said Sunday night.

Mrs. Zinaida Pasternak told a western correspondent who visited their home outside Moscow that her husband was not feeling well.

"He must rest. I am going to cook for him as well as I can and we shall live very quietly here for one year or longer—with no visits or interviews," she said.

Mrs. Pasternak said the excitement over winning the Swedish award and the Kremlin's adverse reaction was too much for the aging Pasternak, who has had a heart condition for some time.

Commenting on the events of the past few days, Mrs. Pasternak said the worst thing that could happen to her husband would be expulsion from the Soviet Union.

Soviet newspapers Sunday published the author's letter to Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev pleading for permission to remain in Russia. The letter said exile would be tantamount to death.

Pasternak wrote the letter after Soviet publications and writers denounced him as a traitor for winning the Nobel prize for his writings, including the novel "Doctor Zhivago," which has not been published in Russia because of its mildly anti-Soviet approach.

The author first accepted the prize but then rejected it.

Musician Killed In Traffic Crash

Buena Park, Calif.—(UPI)—Ben Van Norman, 30, bass fiddler with the musical group that popularized the song "Tequila," was killed today in a traffic collision.

Police said Van Norman was southbound on a street in this Orange county community 20 miles southeast of Los Angeles when he attempted to make a left turn. A car driven by Alphonso Ochoa, 25, struck the Van Norman car and the musician was thrown out of his vehicle and pinned beneath it.

Van Norman was a player with "The Champs" musical group.

Washington—(UPI)—The World Bank reported that 10 loans it made during the three months ended Sept. 30 brought the cumulative total of its loans thus far to $4,010,200,000.

and a false illusion of disunity might be produced.

As the President said in his letter to Senator Green, creation of such an illusion of disunity might make "almost inevitable" conflict which all thinking Americans are working to prevent.

That's the big issue—insure peace with a Republican Congress.

Today the rival candidates and their supporters fire their last salvos of campaign ammunition. Tomorrow America goes to the polls to elect a wide variety of public officials.

Despite many reports of apathy, I am hopeful that the vote will be large. Although the era of large rallies is passing, a growing number of small meetings and increasing use of television serve to keep the voters informed and interested. In addition to this, the fine contribute-and-vote campaign of the American Heritage Foundation and the advertising council will have a strong effect. This year their campaign caused thousands to contribute to a campaign who never contributed before and this, I believe, will also serve to increase the vote. I am certain the flamboyant campaigning by the President and the vice president in the last few weeks will serve to increase the Democratic vote and it may also increase the vote of the other party.

Stranger Campaign

It has been a strange campaign in some ways. I think that sometimes the false issues—socialism, appeasers, labor bosses, etc.—have made bigger headlines than the real issues in the campaign for the Senate and House.

But I face the outcome with confidence. I do not think that false issues are fooling the voters. We have a fine group of candidates in the Democratic Party this year and their neighbors are not going to be persuaded that they are the stooges of a union boss or anyone else. And we have an increasingly vigorous organization in the Democratic party. These are strengths which can and will overcome the financial superiority which the Republicans have enjoyed in this campaign.

Here are some of the real issues which will bring about a Democratic victory:

—People who think four million unemployed is all right will vote Republican; those who want full employment will vote Democratic. People who want the farmer to receive his fair share of the national income will vote Democratic. People who are tired of ever-rising prices, even in a recession, will vote Democratic. People who are more concerned about building schools, hospitals and highways than they are worried about slogans about socialism will vote Democratic.

Back From Brink

The people who want a vigilant Congress to root out corruption in the Federal government will vote Democratic. The people who think there should be somebody around Washington to try to pull the secretary of state back into a sensible position before he gets to the brink will vote Democratic. The people who want laws, not to punish honest unions but to help them kick out the corrupt few in the labor movement will vote Democratic.

—The people who are tired of drift and lack of executive energy and leadership in Washington will vote Democratic so that the Congress will be able to fill at least part of the leadership vacuum which now exists. And finally the people who want to demonstrate that dirty campaigning and smear tactics do not help a candidate will vote for the Democrats who have been subjected to such unfair campaigning.

Because I have just been out in the country and have seen our fine candidates and our strong organization carrying the issues to the people I am confident of a great Democratic victory when the votes are counted. We will gain from 8 to 12 Senate seats and perhaps more and I look to a minimum gain of 40 seats in the House.

Boy's Wish May Be Carried Out

Pompton Lakes, N.J.—(UPI)—Grief-stricken relatives of Paul Grochowitz, 7, whose disappearance 18 days ago spurred an exhaustive manhunt, today considered sending Paul's body "back home" to Tacoma, Wash., for burial, it was learned today.

Paul's weed-covered body was found in the Ramapo river Sunday, wedged at a dock only 500 feet from his parents' home.

The discovery ended an intensive search by police and volunteers and those in three counties, who used civil defense planes and bloodhounds in an effort to track the boy down.

Paul's grandmother, Mrs. Charles Paines, is said to have told a reporter that the boy's parents wanted to bury Paul "back home in Tacoma."

On Oct. 16, Paul ran away from home after several boyish scrapes. He told playmates that he didn't like New Jersey and that he was going "home to grandma" in Tacoma.

What medium do teen-agers rate "most practical"?

RADIO?	TELEVISION?
MAGAZINES?	THE DAILY NEWSPAPER?

ANSWER: THE DAILY NEWSPAPER. In a recent study of teens made by Eugene Gilbert & Co., the daily newspaper was shown to be a big influence on their living and spending habits. When asked which medium they considered the most practical, 54% said it was the daily newspaper, while only 17% named TV. To advertisers who want to get their share of the $9 billion teen market, we say, "Tell it to the teens in the daily newspaper!"
